Wilson Sees Nazi Chiefs In Berlin on Spies, Sports

U. S. Ambassador Talks of Matters That Keep Relations Cool.

Roosevelt Wants More Inquiry Cash

President Castigates Ex-G-Man for Selling Story of Arrests.

By the United Press.

Berlin, June 24.—United States Ambassador Hugh Wilson has taken up with the German government the question of Nazi espionage indictments returned in New York, it was understood today, in conversations that may touch all differences between the two countries.

The troublesome issues in the way of good German-American relations range from sports to foreign debts. The recent indictment in New York of 18 persons, including high officials of the German war ministry, on spying charges served to intensify Nazi resentment.

Wilson visited the foreign office late yesterday at the request of Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and was understood to have discussed the espionage indictments.

The spy case indictments caused particular official resentment here because it was felt that the Reich was being publicized as a "bogey man" to serve American domestic policies.

Germans consider it unfair that men in the official defense service should be indicted and said the coming trial of those under arrest in the United States certainly would not help relations.

Complaints Chronic.

German circles charge members of the United States Government with agitating against the totalitarian regimes to justify the "gargantuan American rearmament" program and with the suspected purpose of preparing the man in the street to support England and France if war breaks out.

The newspaper Angriff opened the campaign today with a two-column broadside signed by Hans Sievernich and dated at New York. The story described alleged successes of communist propaganda in the United States in which Russia is pictured to the American public as

Clergy Opposes Mercy for McCall

Miami, Fla., June 24 (U.P.).—Clergymen and others tonight made widespread protests against an attempt to have Florida's pardon board commute the death sentence of Franklin Pierce McCall, 21-year-old condemned kidnap-killer of little Jimmy Cash, to life imprisonment.

Clergymen throughout Florida, polled on an appeal to the clergy that intercession be made in the youth's behalf because he had heard "the call to preach," generally were against changing the sentence. The pardon board July 7 in Tallahassee will hold a hearing.

FRANCIS M. CARROLL.

BARBARA CARROLL.

Youth Caught With Bodies Admitted Murdering Doctor and Wife, Pleaded Guilty and Is Serving Life Sentence.

By the Associated Press.

South Paris, Me., June 24.—Former Deputy Sheriff Francis M. Carroll, 43, was indicted today for murdering Dr. James G. Littlefield, aged South Paris physician, for whose death Paul N. Dwyer, 18, is now serving a life sentence at Thomaston State Prison.

Carroll pleaded not guilty.

The indictment made no mention of Dwyer. State officials claim Carroll killed the doctor while the three met at Dwyer's home last October.

Carroll, a World War veteran and father of four children was a member of Sheriff F. F. Francis' staff which had Dwyer in custody.

There was nothing to indicate what effect the indictment of Carroll would have on the sentence which Dwyer now is serving.

Details of Dwyer's six-State ride with the bodies of Dr. and Mrs. Jamer G. Littlefield jammed in the

Three Grilled In Murder of Charwoman

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Prince Frederick, Md., June 24.—"Three or four" persons besides the middle-aged streetcar conductor held in the Calvert County Jail were questioned today in the death of Mrs. Esther Lewis, 31-year-old Government charwoman, State's Attorney Arthur W. Dowell said tonight.

Mrs. Lewis was found early Monday in Lyons Creek, the boundary between Calvert and Anne Arundel counties.

Dowell refused to divulge the names of those questioned or what he and his assistants had learned. He did, however, discount reports that a District surgeon was being sought.

Not Looking for Surgeon.

"Police aren't looking for a surgeon," he said. "We know who he is and where he is. It isn't time to question him."

It was reported the physician had been approached by the woman, who would have been a mother next winter. Dowell already has admitted the possibility that an abortion attempt was responsible for her death.

The State's attorney indicated investigation of the mystery was nearing its end, but said details unearthed would not be revealed until a Baltimore chemist had reported on his examination of the woman's organs.

Whitney's Cattle, Horses, Dogs Sold

Bedminster, N. J., June 24 (A.P.).—The rapid-fire cries of an auctioneer resounded today over the country estate of Richard Whitney, New York broker now serving a prison term, as blue-blooded horses, cows and dogs were sold to satisfy creditors.

When the final "sold" was shouted to a throng of approximately 1,000 bidders and spectators, the auctioneers made a hasty count and figured the "take" at $13,400. The bankrupt Whitney had said at a hearing following the collapse of his firm he thought the cattle alone would bring $10,000 to $15,000 and the horses "several thousand."

McCormick's Friend Found Dead on Peak

By the Associated Press.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., June 24.—The body of Richard Whitmer, 20, was found tonight in the Sandia Mountains, but mystery still shrouded the fate of his mountain-climbing companions, Medill McCormick, 21, heir to a Chicago publishing fortune.

Young Whitmer's body, a deep gash in the back of the head, was brought by stretcher to Juan Tabo CCC camp, at the base of the range, and was definitely identified as night brought a halt to the search for McCormick.

Gov. Clyde Tingley and Adjt. Gen. R. C. Charlton, heading the search, explained the terrain in which Whitmer's body was found was so rough and precipitous that a night search would only endanger other lives.

The search will be resumed early tomorrow.

Governor Leads Search.

It was undamaged, apparently parked, in Pussywillow Canyon at the bottom of the 7,000-foot, precipitous Sandia Peak about 20 miles north of here.

McCormick, son of Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms and the late United States Senator Medill McCormick, of Chicago, set out Wednesday morning on a hike with Whitmer, son of Mrs. T. E. Whitmer, of Albuquerque, now in France.

$3,260,000 Program For Fisheries Vetoed

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt vetoed yesterday a bill authorizing a five-year, $3,260,000 building program for the Bureau of Fisheries.

In a memorandum, the President said that a $1,055,350 PWA allotment recently was made for improving and extending existing fish cultural facilities.

U.S. Officials Cautioned in Vote Inquiry

Senate Committee Will Study Indorsements of Candidates.

Aims to Guard Against 'Undue Influence' on Employes.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee delivered a sharp warning yesterday to Federal officials to be careful about indorsing candidates for the Senate.

Conceding that all such indorsements might not be classified as unethical, Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, said the committee nevertheless would investigate the circumstances surrounding the issuance of the statements. This would be done, he said, to guard against the use by any official of "undue influence" on those employed under him.

Sheppard avoided discussion of a possibility that Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator, would be questioned about his statement that if he were a resident of Iowa he would vote for Representative Wearin (Democrat), Iowa, later defeated for the Senatorial nomination by Senator Gillette (Democrat), Iowa.

Hopkins Not Discussed.

"Mr. Hopkins' statement has not been brought before the committee and I don't want to be put in the position of prejudging any issue," Sheppard said. "Anybody has a right to state his position politically. It's a question of whether 'undue influence' is involved that interests the committee."

Sheppard said, however, that the committee definitely is on record against political use of relief funds. He said he believed a WPA foreman should not publicly announce to the workers whose jobs he controlled that he favored any particular Senate candidate. Whether this should extend to the highest WPA officials was a matter to be decided by the circumstances of each incident, he indicated.

The committee gave senatorial candidates a wide open invitation to complain about their opponents, in approving tentatively a questionnaire to be sent to the political aspirants. The questionnaire will ask the candidates to give the committee information on any political Smith, Who Helped Block Pay-Hour Bill, Marked for Opposition.

Son of Ex-Envoy Dodd Wins Administration Support in Fight.

Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, member of the House Rules Committee, which twice blocked direct House action on a wage-hour bill, yesterday was marked for Administration opposition in Virginia's August 2 primaries.

Reputedly carrying White House blessings in this section's second attempted party "purge" was William E. Dodd, jr., of Round Hill, son of the former Ambassador to Germany and a recent White House caller.

Anderson Mentioned.

Reports persisted in Virginia's Eighth District that Robert N. Anderson, special assistant to the Attorney General, would take leave of absence from his Justice Department office to manage the campaign of Dodd, who is running on a straight Administration platform.

"I know nothing about it."

Questioned more closely, he refused to deny or confirm reports that he would participate in the campaign. Anderson supported Roosevelt at Chicago in 1932, and has been active in the organization of Young Democrats.

Smith Declines Comment.

Names of two other prominent New Dealers figured in the Dodd camp claims of support.

Representative Smith, who has never been opposed since he was first elected in 1930, and is now backed by a strong organization, declined comment other than to say:

"Inquire at the White House."

Friends of the Representative expressed doubt that the President was taking a personal interest, and attributed any New Deal support claimed for Dodd to Thomas Corcoran, RFC attorney, whose name also figured in the attempted Iowa purge of Senator Gillette.

Barbara Hutton Is Reported Fleeing to U. S. From Count

By the United Press.

London (Saturday), June 25.—Countess Barbara Haugwitz-Reventlow was reported early today to have slipped away quietly from her Regent's Park home here, and perhaps taken with her her 2-year-old son, Lance, to protect him from any abduction attempt.

One rumor said the countess had gone to Southampton to board the Bremen for the United States.

Reports that the American-born Woolworth heiress had left London spread rapidly after it was rumored she had been advised to take Lance secretly to some other part of England because her blue-blooded Danish husband might return and demand admittance to their London town house.

The advice to the blonde heiress was believed to have resulted from her conferences late today with Scotland Yard officials and a prominent banker.

While seeking means of safeguarding her son, Lance, and the $40,000,000 5-and-10-cent store fortune that some day will be his, the countess was understood to be so fearful of abduction that she is considering steps to regain her forfeited American citizenship.

Her conferences with the Scotland Yard officials and the banker, who is said to control a portion of her fortune, gave rise to rumors the twice-wed countess had rejected efforts to bring about a reconciliation between her and Count Haugwitz-Reventlow.

The count, 17 years older than his

President Maintains Right as Head of Party to Intervene When Primary Issues Are Clear.

By Scott Hart.

President Roosevelt moved yesterday to extend the merit system in Government "upward, outward and downward" through an unexpected executive order bringing approximately 130,000 exempt positions under competitive civil service requirements.

There is a stipulation that incumbents may take noncompetitive tests and for this reason no wholesale turnover in personnel is anticipated. In other words, the order is not retroactive and would not force incumbents out of office if, in the noncompetitive tests, they prove their fitness.

But it is interpreted as very largely removing Senatorial patronage, because the order embraces the administrative forces of the Government.

With the same pen stroke, the President warned Federal employes against participating in politics and political campaign management, laid the framework for the long-sought machinery to settle employe grievances, made greater the opportunities for employe promotion, and inaugurated a training program.

In many respects, the reforms visualized in the orders parallel those projected in the civil service section of the defeated Government reorganization bill. They put into effect reforms long advocated by the Civil Service Commission, the National Civil Service Reform League, the Brownlow Committee on Personnel and other groups.

From an economic standpoint, the President's sweeping order, which becomes effective February 1, 1939, is expected to prove a boon to the City of Washington. The Government pay roll here, which totals nearly $16,000,000 a month, is, of course, the largest item of income, with tourists' expenditures second.

May Purchase Homes.

The more secure Government workers feel in their jobs, it was pointed out, the more likely they are to root themselves in Washington, and to buy homes and invest their money in local projects and institutions—and the President's order was seen as definitely rendering a vast majority of Government workers more secure.

While the order was not specific as to the departments affected, it was presumed that all administrative New Deal agencies, hitherto outside the merit system, would be brought under the protection of civil service.

However, no one in authority would say last night which agencies now outside the civil service will be brought in because of the order. In many instances, Congress specified that certain units be kept without the civil service. In no event can the executive order touch these. It was indicated the President, the Civil Service Commissioners and department heads generally would have to confer on the scope of the order.

All Under Civil Service.

In short, the Federal field has been blanketed under the Civil Service Commission, with exception of policy-determining positions and those exempted by the operation of statute. Others may be exempt, where extraordinary circumstances dictate.

According to the Civil Service Commission, the order will concern 71,000 workers in agencies financed by emergency funds. It still will leave 180,000 Federal jobs outside the merit system. Current figures indicate that 813,000 persons are holding Federal jobs. Of these, 533,000 are at the moment covered by the Civil Service.

Federal employe unions, which have indorsed and worked for many of the measures the President now orders, were in the main elated at the development.

Backed by Both Unions.

The American Federation of Government Employes and the United Federal Workers of America, affiliated with the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., respectively, were in general accord in approving the President's order.

Many in personnel circles saw the order as vindicating the President's campaign pledge to extend

'There Will Be Mean Blows'

THE PRESIDENT as he addressed the Nation last night.

Our Government, happily, is a democracy. As part of the democratic process, your President is again taking an opportunity to report on the progress of national affairs to the real rulers of this country—the voting public.

The Seventy-Fifth Congress, elected in November, 1936 on a platform uncompromisingly liberal, has adjourned. Barring unforeseen events, there will be no session until the new Congress, to be elected in November, assembles next January.

On the one hand, the Seventy-Fifth Congress has left many things undone.

For example, it refused to provide more businesslike machinery for running the Executive Branch of the Government. The Congress also failed to meet my suggestion that it take the far-reaching steps necessary to put the railroads of the country back on their feet.

Mentions Important Achievements.

But, on the other hand, the Congress, striving to carry out the Platform on which most of them were elected achieved more for the future good of the country than any Congress between the end of the World War and the Spring of 1933.

I mention only the more important of these achievements.

1. It improved still further our agricultural laws to give the farmer a fairer share of the national income, to preserve our soil, to provide an all-weather granary, to help the farm tenant toward independence, to find new uses for farm products, and to begin crop insurance.

2. After many requests on my part the Congress passed a Fair

The President assailed "outspoken reactionaries" and "yes, but" candidates alike, and declared he is "charged with the responsibility of carrying out the definitely liberal declaration of principles set forth in the 1936 Democratic platform."

His threat of personal intervention in some primaries closed a speech on the state of the Nation that bristled with criticism of "Copperheads" who oppose New Deal reforms and "calamity-howling" executives who oppose wage-hour bill minimums.

Setting at rest special session rumors, the President berated Congress for not passing Government reorganization and rail-aid bills, but praised it for achieving "more for the future good of the country" than any post-war Congress before 1933.

He blamed the depression on private enterprise, for last year's increase in inventories and prices; on labor leaders, for "going too far;" and on Government "optimism in assuming that industry and labor would themselves make no mistakes."

Sees Court Reform Won.

The court bill fight he called "a lost battle which won a war" and declared his court reform objectives have since "been substantially attained."

Finally he called on capital and labor alike to co-operate with Government, and declared for continued reforms on lines of "sane consistent liberalism." He said "Government can not take a holiday of a year, a month, or even a day just because a few people are tired or frightened by the inescapable pace of this modern world in which we live."

Appealing to "the mass of the American people" for support in solving business, agricultural and social problems, he said:

"In simple frankness and in simple honesty, I need all the help I can get—and I see signs of getting more help in the future from many who have fought against progress with tooth and nail."

Plans Speaking Tour.

His appeal for support of "liberal" candidates in the coming elections coincided with his own plans for a speaking tour of sharply-contested political territory. His closing words contrasted with a decision of the Senate campaign expenditures committee yesterday to investigate use of official influence, as well as Federal funds, in behalf of any Senatorial candidates.

While Mr. Roosevelt said he has no intention of taking part in Democratic primaries "as President," he declared he has every right as head of his party "to speak in those few instances" where there is a clear issue in liberal and conservative principles between candidates or where "misuse" of his name is involved.

"Do not misunderstand me," the President said. "I certainly would not indicate a preference in a State primary merely because a candidate, otherwise liberal in outlook, had

Monopoly Quiz Will Be Headed By O'Mahoney

President Names 5 New Dealers, One Democrat to Aid Inquiry.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, was definitely picked to be chairman of the joint Congressional and departmental committee to investigate monopolies, it was learned yesterday, as President Roosevelt named six Administration officials to represent Federal agencies in the inquiry. Five of the Administration nominees are emphatically New Dealers and the other is a loyal Democrat.

The selections were disclosed after Mr. Roosevelt conferred with Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury; Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce; William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission; Thurman W. Arnold, Assistant Attorney General; Acting Secretary of Labor Charles V. McLaughlin, and Garland S. Ferguson, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission.

Meeting Set Next Week.

The Administration officials named to join the three Senators and three Representatives to serve on the board of inquiry, including the five names disclosed in The Washington Post two days ago, are: Richard C. Patterson, assistant Secretary of Commerce; William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, with Commissioner Jerome N. Frank, as alternate; Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury, with Rear Admiral Christian Peeples, as alternate; Isador Lubin, chief of the Bureau of Labor Statistics in the Labor Department; Garland Ferguson, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, with Commissioner Edwin L. Davis as alternate; Thurman Arnold —head of the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice.

Roper said the group plans to meet early next week to lay the groundwork of the scope of the inquiry for which Congress appropriated $500,000 under the O'Mahoney resolution.

Wealth of DData Available.

With the possible exception of Ferguson, who can be labeled as a loyal Democrat but not a conspicuous New Dealer, the balance of the interdepartmental administration group are vigorous adherents and supporters of Mr. Roosevelt's economic philosophy. Messrs. Arnold, Douglas and Frank are avowed opponents of bigness in business, Patterson, Lubin and McLaughlin, although not as widely publicized New Dealers, are supporters of the President's ideas.

Oliphant and Peeples as Treasury representatives on the committee will bring a wealth of data to the investigation showing alleged collusive bids by the steel, rubber and cement industries in their sales to the huge Government projects which the New Deal undertook since its inception.

The Treasury is also heavily interested in the question of taxation and monopolies. Data which it amassed in the course of administering the undistributed profits tax, investigation of holding companies and loopholes through which quasi-public monopolies escape Federal taxation are expected to be highlighted during the investigation.

SEC Is Already Busy.

The SEC is now busily engaged in correlating the immense statistics which it has accumulated in its five year period of organization. Statistics on capital financing by leading investment banking firms, concentration of assets under utility holding company dominance, investment trust and investment company domination in industry, monopolistic practices in national securities exchanges, and alleged banker dominance of insurance companies, railroads and industrial enterprises, will make up the bulk of its end of the investigation.

The Department of Commerce agenda has not been drawn up, but it is learned that the complaints of the small businessmen, which Roper gathered at their conference, and various other surveys which have been given to the White House will be brought to the committee's attention. The chief complaint of small business men was against the chains.

The Federal Trade Commission will highlight alleged monopolies in the steel, rubber, cement and automobile industries. Its own data will be correlated with that of the Treasury Department's on Government purchases in the products of these industries.

PWA Releases $46,115,814 to States, Cities

3-Day Total Brought to $221,311,055; Vandenberg Hits Spending.

The Public Works Administration yesterday released grants and loans totaling $46,115,814 to States and municipalities.

These allotments brought a three-day total to $221,311,055, and for the time ended grants and loans for non-Federal projects. Today the PWA will start giving out allotments for Federal projects.

Officials estimate that when States and municipalties have put up their share, total construction costing $440,585,029 will have been provided for.

To Double Loans.

Meanwhile, the Government planned to more than double its loans in the 1939 fiscal year to reduce farm tenancy.

Congress appropriated $25,000,000 for this purpose for the year ending June 30, 1939, compared with $10,000,000 in 1938.

Officials said this not only would permit larger apportionments to States, but the funds to be loaned tenants for purchase of farms would be spread over 367 additional counties. In the last fiscal year loans were made in 333 counties.

238,654 Given Jobs.

The Federal Employment Service found jobs for 238,654 workers in May, but its file of jobseekers, bulging with 1,191,126 new applications, reached the highest point in the last year—7,520,459.

The service yesterday announced it placed 159,234 men and women in private employment during May, and the rest were put on public construction and relief projects.

The report showed that men outnumbered women among the jobseekers 4 to 1.

Flays "Pump-Priming."

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 24 (AP). Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, in an address prepared for delivery here tonight, warned that "pump-priming" could "produce a temporary fever flush" but that "it cannot produce permanent health."

Speaking at a banquet of the Michigan Bankers Association, Vandenberg said that "with 11,000,000 unemployed five years ago we tried 'pump priming.' After the most lavish, prodigal spending spree in the annals of well-meaning profligacy we wind up with not 11,000,000 but with 13,000,000 unemployed."

Present needs, he said, are:

"Balanced public budgets, application of business common sense in Government, . . . public thrift, . . . honest mathematics in high places."

Regulation of business "for its own sake and for the common welfare. Police business—to protect the good from the bad."

Minton Will Keep Hands Off in Race

Indianapolis, June 24 (AP).—Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, indicated tonight he would pursue a "hands-off" policy in relation to selection of a Democratic senatorial candidate here July 12.

Asked whether he would support his colleague, Frederick Van Nuys, in his announced re-election plans, Minton replied:

"That depends on the ticket he runs on."

Van Nuys apparently is slated for retirement by the State administration. He has said he would seek re-election as an independent.

Job Placement Rises 12 Pct. In D. C. in May

Increase of 6% in Nation Is Reported by Federal Employment Service.

A 12 per cent increase in job placements for the District and a 6 per cent increase throughout the Nation from April to May was reported yesterday by the Federal Employment Service.

According to Acting Secretary of Labor Charles V. McLaughlin, placements for the District in May totaled 2,651, with 2,372 in private employment and 891 in what are classed as more than temporary jobs.

For the entire country placements totaled 238,654, with 159,234 in private employment. At the same time applications were rising to high figures for the year, with the adire National file being 7,520,459 on May 31, and the District file being 42,882.

As industrial employment slumped throughout the country, 1,025 establishments reported District employment dropped 1.2 per cent during the month. Payrolls for a single week in May ran against the employment trend, however, to show an increase of .3 per cent over a comparable week in April.

Richberg, Hurley Talk to Hull for 2 Oil Companies

By the Associated Press.

American oil companies have called in former Government officials to help them regain $150,000,000 worth of oil properties expropriated by Mexico more than three months ago.

Two have appeared at the State Department so far—Donald L. Richberg, former NRA administrator, and Patrick Hurley, Secretary of War under President Hoover.

Hurley held a long conference Thursday with Secretary Hull on behalf of the Sinclair Oil Co., which had extensive oil holdings in Mexico. Richberg has seen Hull on behalf of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Both men want the State Department to take a more active part in negotiations toward a settlement.

Roosevelt to Pay Sunday Night Visit To Du Pont Home

President Roosevelt will spend Sunday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene duPont near Wilmington, Del.

The Eugene duPonts are the parents of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. The President last visited their estate, Owls Nest, to attend the wedding reception a year ago for Franklin, jr., and his bride, Ethel.

Mr. Roosevelt will leave Washington Sunday afternoon to speak Monday in Wilmington on the occasion of the 300th anniversary celebration of the landing of Swedish and Finnish colonists in Delaware.

After the address and a chat with Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf and the Crown Princess Louise of Sweden, the President will go to Poughkeepsie, N. Y. He expects to see the last two races of the Poughkeepsie rowing regatta, Monday afternoon.

Army Planes Use Twin Propellers On Single Motor

The War Department said yesterday that tests recently completed at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, had proved a two-propellered plane powered by a single motor more efficient at high speeds than a single propeller craft.

Operating in opposite directions, the twin propellers are expected to solve a number of problems resulting from constantly mounting power in airplane engines.

Revolving on two separate drive shafts, one inclosed within the other, the propellers are mounted one immediately behind the other and both in front of the motor and the plane.

Experiments with tandem propellers operating in different directions are not new, the department said, pointing out that tests along this line were conducted as early as 1917. These tests showed that the principle could best be realized at high speeds.

Borah Says Supreme Court Must Reverse Itself if Child Labor Ban Is to Stand.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, one of the comparatively few Senators remaining in Washington, yesterday expressed the view that the Supreme Court must reverse itself on two previous decisions if the prohibition on child labor in the wage-hour law is to become effective.

BORAH.

While much of the law was built on principles enunciated by a majority of the court in the Washington State minimum wage decision of last year, Borah told the Associated Press the child-labor provisions were based on a minority opinion written by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes in 1918. In that case, Hammer vs. Dagenhart, Justice Holmes summed up with this observation:

"It is enough that, in the opinion of Congress, the transportation (in interstate commerce of goods produced with child labor) encourages the evil (of child labor)."

In 1922 the court held unconstitutional a 1919 law placing a 10 per cent tax on the entire net profit of firms which employed child labor.

Inclusion of Puerto Rico, the most tropical part of the United States, under terms of the wage-hour bill was said, meanwhile, by the Puerto Rican Trade Council, to threaten to prevent that island "from attaining the economic improvement for which it has been striving desperately."

Some industrialists on the island, the council said, are giving consideration to the possibilities of forming co-operatives as a means of remaining in business under the higher wages, and others are hopeful that homework will be exempt from provisions of the law.

Congressional attaches said yesterday the special Senate committee named to study taxation of Government securities and salaries was expected to begin its deliberations early in the fall.

The committee included Senators Brown (Democrat), Michigan; Byrd (Democrat), Virginia; Townsend (Republican), Delaware; Logan (Democrat), Kentucky; McGill (Democrat), Kansas, and Austin (Republican), Vermont.

The committee will designate its own chairman, expected to be Brown, author of the resolution which created the committee.

The subject has been gone into in considerable detail by Byrd, who last year sponsored a resolution to submit the question to the country in a constitutional amendment. The resolution received the approval of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Col. J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said yesterday that Germany probably would make experimental airplane flights across the Atlantic to the United States again this summer. He announced receipt of a formal application from the German air line, Deutsche Lufthansa, and commented:

"While a few details remain to be settled, there apears to be no substantial obstacle in the way of granting permission."

The application calls for 14 round trips to Port Washington, Long Island, N. Y.

Johnson said recently France also was considering similar experimental flights. Imperial Airways, of Great Britain, and Pan American Airways, of this country, are scheduled to start regular mail and passenger service across the Atlantic this fall, probably in September.

Ambush Is Denied By Harlan Defense

London, Ky., June 24 (AP).—The Harlan labor trial defense today undertook to prove ambush shots fired at a United Mine Workers of America organizzer in January, 1937, were not fired by deputy sheriffs.

The organizer, Marshall Musick, and his wife, were fired upon as they walked homeward near Ridgeway, Ky. Neither was struck. Subsequently, Musick's son was killed in his home by bullets the Government says were intended for the father.

Week-end recess today brought to a close the first week of the defense's case and the sixth week of the trial.

Realty Secretary Urged for Cabinet

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 24.—E. B. Murray, of Kansas City, yesterday re-elected president of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, went on record today in favor of a secretary of real estate and construction in the President's Cabinet. The importance of real estate and construction in the economic life of the Nation justifies such representation, he declared.

Murray said he planned to place the idea before his organization at the first meeting of officers and directors.

Aiken Declares Flood Bill Will Peril State Rule

Basic Issue Is Deeper Than Production of Power, Governor Says.

By the Associated Press.

Woodstock, Vt., June 24.—George D. Aiken, Republican Governor of Vermont, tonight warned that presidential and judicial approval of the Federal flood control bill would mean "the necessary step has been taken for a practical abolition of State government."

"The basic issue is neither power production nor flood control, but is one of maintaining a balance of power between State and Federal Government," Aiken told the fifty-first quarterly meeting of the New England council in a prepared address.

"The bill, as passed by Congress," he said, "provides that the Federal Government may seize without consent the waters of any State under the pretext of flood control. The backers of this plan to centralize ownership and authority of resources very shrewdly capitalized on the animosity of the people as a whole toward utility companies.

"As far as I am concerned, the conflict has not at any time been one to preserve the profits of utility companies on the actual or fictitious valuations of their developments. . . . I have not been able to regard this problem as a purely flood control problem because I feel that the possible benefit derived from construction of retention dams has been grossly over-estimated."

He threw down the gauntlet with the declaration that Vermont would continue to fight "for our existence as a State and for the right of our people to be self-governing."

"Recent primary elections and a poll of public opinion indicate clearly that the great majority of the people desire that the balance of power between the States and Federal Government be maintained. The make-up of the next Congress undoubtedly will reflect this sentiment."

Vaster Priming Of Pump Seen By Henderson

If Present Spending Is Not Sufficient, More Is Planned, He Says.

By Paul Tobenkin.

Camp Tamiment, Pa., June 24.—If the present pump-priming program of the administration fails to restore business to normal levels the Government may launch an even larger and more ambitious spending policy to compensate for the lack of purchasing power, Dr. Leon Henderson, economic consultant to the Works Progress Administration, said today at the fourth annual conference of the Tamiment Economic and Social Institute here.

Dr. Henderson predicted vast expenditures voted by the last session of Congress would aid greatly in stimulating private business within the next year, but indicated that if capital refused to act even with the spending program in effect, plans were under way in Washington for the introduction of a large-scale recovery program.

The program would include the following major points:

Increased taxation to force idle capital into productive channels.

Wagner to Keep Seat in Senate, President Hints

President Roosevelt gave broad indication yesterday that as far as he is concerned Senator Robert F. Wagner will not be pressed to run for governor this year but will be welcomed as a candidate to succeed himself in the Senate.

With Gov. Herbert H. Lehman aiming to run for New York's other vacant Senate chair, this leaves wide open the Democratic nomination for governor.

Later Mr. Roosevelt was asked about Gov. Lehman's announcement for the seat vacated by the death of Senator Royal S. Copeland. The President said he could not comment on all the political questions that might come up. He said he had been so busy on legislative bills and the preparation of his speech last night that he had lacked time even to read the papers.

On one other semi-political matter Mr. Roosevelt made himself clear. A few days ago Gov. E. W. Marland of Oklahoma suggested publicly Mr. Roosevelt should keep out of that State because of the local political battle which finds the Governor opposing Senator Elmer Thomas and Representative Gomer Smith in the Senatorial primary.

Mr. Roosevelt, however, declared yesterday that he intended to say a few kind words in Oklahoma and that he would speak in Oklahoma City, the State Capital. His visit on this occasion is sure to be interpreted as a friendly gesture in behalf of Senator Thomas for whose renomination White House favor already has been indicated.

Race Wide Open.

Already in the field is the State's attorney general, John J. Bennett, jr., who announced his candidacy a few hours after three-term Gov. Lehman expressed willingness to campaign for the Senate.

Representative James M. Mead, long a consistent supporter of President Roosevelt, was regarded as a likely gubernatorial candidate, along with State Comptroller Morris S. Tremaine, also of Buffalo.

Sentiment for Senator Wagner as a gubernatorial candidate was announced by one up-State leader after a survey two days ago, in the belief he would be the strongest candidate the party could offer, especially if Manhattan Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey is drafted by the Republicans to run for the office.

Selection for the Senate of Lehman and Wagner, both of whom are New York City residents, would increase the likelihood of an up-State nominee for Governor, Democratic leaders aver.

Cleveland bankers have agreed to buy the notes, Gesel said, which will be issued in anticipation of the 1939 sales tax collection.

Italy, Germany Reassure Swiss On Neutrality

They Will Respect State's Traditional Aloofness, Totalitarians Say.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, June 24.—Italy and Germany today formally assured Switzerland they would respect her as long as she followed her traditional aloofness from international squabbles.

The assurances were given in an exchange of letters between Berne and Rome and Berne and Berlin.

Switzerland asked the League of Nations in April to free her from obligations to take part in sanctions—such as the economic and financial measures levied against Italy in the Ethiopian war. The League Council on May 14 gave Switzerland this freedom and five days later the nation informed her non-League neighbors, Germany and Italy, formally of what had been done.

Ciano States Policy.

"The Italian government is convinced that the unconditional maintenance of the integral and perpetual neutrality of Switzerland constitutes an important factor for peace in Europe," Italy's foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, wrote.

(Joachim von Ribbentrop, Germany's foreign minister, sent a note dated June 21 in which he wrote:

("The Swiss government may rest assured that its will to maintain neutrality, to which new expression now is given, will at all times find a corresponding will of the German government to recognize this neutrality and respect it.")

Mussolini repeatedly has expressed his friendly sentiments for Switzerland but, after Switzerland joined in applying sanctions against Italy, in the Italo-Ethiopian war, Fascists said a clarification of her position was necessary.

Italy and Germany assured respect for the republic's neutrality only for themselves. They did not guarantee inviolability of Swiss soil as far as third powers may be concerned.

News Plane Kills 2 Photographers In Circus Crash

Scranton, Pa., June 24 (AP).—Two newspaper photographers were killed today in an airplane crash on the grounds where the Ringling Brothers, Barnum & Bailey circus is tied up by a strike.

Bob Raine, 25, of the Scranton Tribune staff, and Arthur Young, 30, pilot and cameraman for the same paper, were the victims.

The ship plummeted from a height of about 50 feet, witnesses said, and Raine jumped and was killed instantly. Young stayed at the controls, suffering injuries from which he died an hour later.

Striking employes of the circus—held showless for two days—met late today to vote on whether to load the trains to take the big winter quarters, but no agreement was indicated. The circus was ordered from the city by Mayor Fred J. Huester, who said conditions were becoming insanitary on the circus grounds.

Court Nullifies Advertising Ban Of Liquor Board

Richmond, Va., June 24 (AP).—Judge Julien Gunn, in City Circuit Court, held today the General Assembly did not empower the State liquor board to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages.

Consolvo & Cheshire, Inc., outdoor advertising firm, of Norfolk, had petitioned the court to restrain the ABC board from enforcing its regulation prohibiting outdoor advertising of alcoholic beverages.

In a letter to counsel in the case, Judge Gunn said today it was the opinion of the court that the firm's petition should be granted as the power of the board regarding outdoor advertising was regulatory and not prohibitory.

'Blackmail' Case Costs Hotel Suit

A suit for $50,000 damages against the owners of the Washington Hotel was filed in United States District Court yesterday by Mrs. Mary Krieger, former Oklahoma City school teacher, who figured in a blackmail case last year.

Mrs. Krieger, who was acquitted of the blackmail charges in United States District Court, charged the National Capital Hotel Corporation with conspiring with detectives and others in setting a trap for her in a Washington hotel room.

As a result, the complaint said, Mrs. Krieger suffered "humiliation . . . infamy, and public disgrace."

Russia Seizes 29 For Japanese Raid

Moscow, June 24 (AP).—Tass (Russian official news agency) reported today that Soviet border guards had arrested a barge load of 29 armed Koreans and Chinese who admitted Japanese sent them across the Amur River from Manchukuo into Siberia for wrecking on Soviet territory.

The dispatch, from Blagoveschensk, Siberia, said Japanese arms, a camera and other articles were seized. Eight of those arrested had landed on the Soviet shore when Soviet guards appeared.

The dispatch termed the landing a provocation organized by Japanese extremists with the intention of creating border incidents.

Gaboon Viper, Feral, Sluggish, Gives Mighty Hiss at D. C. Zoo

Her Venom Affects Both Blood and Brain, and Fangs Are World's Longest, Says Collector Who Named Her 'Cemetery Shortcut.'

By Gerald G. Gross

Turn on the water in your bathtub full force, step out of the bathroom and shut the door. The sound you'll hear will give you a fair idea how Cemetery Shortcut sounds off when she is angry.

Cemetery Shortcut is the huge gaboon viper uncrated at the Zoo yesterday by her collector, Silas E. Johnson. She had been in that box ever since May 7, and she came out angry.

Johnson, 28-year-old son of an American who went to West Africa more than 40 years ago to practice medicine, said this particular specimen is one of the two largest ever brought into the United States. He brought in the other, a male, which is bound for Brookfield Zoo in Chicago.

The viper is about 5 feet long, 5 inches in diameter and has 2-inch fangs. Johnson believes it's the world's deadliest snake. Its venom affects both the blood and the brain. He is sure no other serpent has longer fangs.

Although the gaboon viper's bite means speedy death, it is a relatively safe creature to handle. That, Johnson exxplained, is because the mottled brown reptile is sluggish. It won't bother anyone unless stepped on or otherwise annoyed.

"African natives eat more gaboon vipers than vice versa," Johnson said. "Their meat—the snakes, that is—isvery tasty."

The snake is known to climb trees to snare and devour a hapless monkey or bird. It can get away with a small antelope, but its fare consists mostly of frogs, toads, rodents and other small animals.

Name Is From French.

The snake gets its name from a colony in French Equatorial Africa whence it comes—Gabon. The English spell it with an extra "o." Gabon, incidentally, is Johnson's birthplace.

Other animals in the same shipment that arrived yesterday, also collected by Johnson, were two potto, two rough scaled vipers and a pair of brush tailed porcupines. All are from the French Cameroons in West Africa.

The potto is a species of lemur, which is related to the monkeys. This particular variety is probably the most lethargic, presenting a comic picture as it slow motions its way up a branch. One of the new arrivals is a six-months baby and the other is fully grown. Washington's Zoo hasn't had a potto for eight or nine years.

Never before has the Zoo had a pair of brush tailed porcupines, so called because of the whisk brooms at the tips of their tails. Keepers have them under observation to find out whether they actually brush each other off at intervals.

Sign Firm Claims District Markers Infringe Patents

The Visible Night and Day Sign Co., holders of a patent on a type of street-direction signs, are causing District officials much concern.

It was brought to light yesterday that a group of easy-to-see street signs in use here resemble the type patented by the company.

Several years ago District Electrical Engineer Walter E. Kern, introduced a new frame which permitted street signs to hang on an angle so they could be seen more easily

Kern received letters from the Chicago firm stating it had patent rights on that type of sign. Kern sought the advice of the District Commissioners, who in turn sought the advice of the Corporation Counsel's office, who employed Floyd H. Sutton, a patent attorney.

Net result: The District will pay about $500 to Sutton and—maybe—more to the sign company.

Plot Uncovered To Unseat Ruler Of Afghanistan

Tonight the government issued a communique, saying: "In view of its international obligations, the government of India are watching the situation most carefully and taking such steps as are possible to prevent any influx of Waziristan tribes into Afghan territory."

Waziristan is a mountain tract bordering Afghanistan.

U. S. Near the Bottom, Col. Ayres Convinced

New Brunswich, N. J., June 24 (AP).—Col. Leonard P. Ayres, conomist and vice president of the Cleveland Trust Co., said tonight he believed "we are now probably at or near the bottom of the present de ression."

Speaking before the graduate school of banking at Rutgers University, Col. Ayres declared the Government pump priming program is "a really important laboratory experiment in applied economics."

Real Estate Commission Urges Dealing With Licensees Only.

Real estate and business chance brokers' licenses in force June 1 totaled 1,419, the Real Estate Commission announced yesterday in its report for 1937-1938.

The commission urged the public to deal only with licensed persons and to telephone the commission when in doubt.

It is unlawful to offer property for sale or for rent without the written consent of the owner or his agent, the commission pointed out.

The law provides no fee for licenses issued to business chance brokers who deal in the goodwill of businesses. No fee is charged firms, partnerships or corporations but the individual members of officers actively participating in the business must each pay the regular broker's license fee. License fee for brokers is $50 and for salesmen $10.

Ruhland Seeks PWA Funds for Health Center

Includes Project Among Urgent Proposals Now Before Ickes.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday requested the District Commissioners to include a new health center in the PWA projects now under consideration by PWA Administrator Ickes.

Ruhland said the center would be on New York avenue northwest, near M street, on property acquired by the National Park and Planning Commission.

Meanwhile, the District Commissioners awaited Ickes' approval of 15 construction projects submitted Thursday. Yesterday Ickes indicated he saw no reason why the District should not receive the entire $18,150,000 needed.

Although Ickes has not inspected the "urgently needed" projects, three—a Municipal Court Building, Juvenile Court Building and a ward building at Gallinger Hospital—have been approved by the PWA examining division.

The projects, which include an allotment of $2,225,000 for the Health Department, could be started before January 1, officials pointed ou The sum of $165,000 would be required to build the new health center, Dr. Ruhland said. Municipal Architect Nathan C. Wyeth has already drawn plans for it.

An initial health center already appropriated for by Congress, will be built on the site of the Cardozo School, First and Delaware avenue southeast, with $200,000 provided. Members of the District space finding committee, headed by Assistant Engineer Commissioner H. S. Bishop, will meet Monday in Bishop's office to discuss final plans for this project.

Other health projects sought under PWA loans are a general medical ward building at Gallinger Hospital, $750,000; a building at Glenn Dale Sanatorium, $800,000, and expansion of Gallinger Hospital facilities, $675,000.

U. S. Will Build 4 Battleships Of 35,000 Tons

Leahy, After a White House Talk, Asserts Contracts Will Be Let in Fall.

Construction of four 35,000-ton battleships will begin within the next six months, Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of Naval Operations, said yesterday after a conference with President Roosevelt.

The Navy will advertise for bids on the vessels about July 15 and contracts will be awarded before October 1, he stated.

Swanson Moves for Haste.

Meanwhile, Secretary of the Navy Swanson took steps to hasten building operations and provide for stable employment in Navy yards.

In a letter to the commandants of nine yards on the East and West Coasts he estimated that increased employment, necessitated by the additional building, would reach its peak in 1942, and said, "every effort is being made to start the work at the earliest possible date, not only to expedite navy shipbuilding, but also to assist in relieving the current unemployment situation.

"It is expected that, during the calendar year 1939, there will be a very material increase in civilian employment at many of the navy yards," he continued.

"This being the case, it is desirable in the meantime that no further lay-offs of civilian employes take place if it can be prevented, except for cause. It is also undesirable to take on employes for short periods to be followed by discharge of a larger number than were hired."

Undecided on Airship.

Under present plans, three of the fighting ships will be built in commercial plants, and the fourth will be undertaken by a Navy Yard, probably that at Norfolk. Admiral Leahy added that the size of the bids submitted will determine finally whether any battleships will be granted to private yards.

The admiral said he believed the group of capital ships to be laid down after those announced yesterday will be of 45,000 tons, but gave no indication how many of the larger vessels were contemplated

Leahy said a decision would be made later on construction of the projected $3,000,000 dirigible. He said rigid lighter-than-aircraft might prove useful for commercial purposes, but agreed that dirigibles have not proved of great value for naval purposes.

General Motors Election Ordered By Labor Board

The National Labor Relations Board last night ordered a collective bargaining election within 20 days among 1,200 hourly paid employes at three subsidiaries of General Motors Corporation, in Oakland, Calif.

The election will be conducted at the Fisher Body Division, the Chevrolet Division and the Oakland Parts Division of the General Motors Sales Corporation, and is the first NLRB election in a G. M. C. plant.

Workers will choose between the United Automobile Workers of America, a committee for Industrial Organization affiliate, and the National Automobile Workers of the International Association of Machinists, an American Federation of Labor union.

The C. I. O. union has a contract with the company covering its own members only. The board said that the U. A. W. established a majority status on the basis of membership cards checked against the company's pay roll, but the I. A. M. contended that the U. A. W. coerced some employes to sign cards.

Radio Pioneering Topic at Meeting

Other speakers before the more than 200 delegates included P. B. McKeel, of the Bureau of Air Commerce; Lieut. E. Jett, U. S. N., and Dr. J. H. Dellinger, of the Bureau of Standards.

D.C. Octogenarian Will Sing on 4th From Skyscraper

DR. ALFREDO WARSAW.

A Washington octogenarian, who found the Fountain of Youth in a shower bath, will defy the din of Manhattan traffic this Fourth of July by singing from the top of the Empire State Building, unaided by radio.

He is Dr. Alfredo Warsaw, of 2220 Twentieth street northwest, formerly well-known in the Metropolitan Opera, who performed a similar feat when he sang from the highest window in the Washington Monument back in 1910.

Twenty years ago his doctors told him death was near. He won his way back to health by taking 25 eight-hour shower baths—but today, his voice restored, a cold shower is his tonic.

Dr. Warsaw is a native of Warsaw, Poland, where he was born in 1858. He came to America in 1889. His arrangement to sing from the tallest building in the world has been made with Mrs. Julia Chandler, manager of the skyscraper's observation tower.

Parachute Jumps Set for Tomorrow

At Queen's Chapel Airport tomorrow E. C. Kegley will bail out of a plane at 2,500 feet with a triangle-shaped parachute and a sack of flour. By pulling guide lines on the chute, Kegley will attempt to write with the flour as he glides to earth. He is scheduled to jump at 3, 5 and 7 p. m. Another jumper, Louis A. Barr, is scheduled to bail out with a new-type chute at Beacon Airport at 4 and 6 p. m. Barr will leap from a height of about 4,000 feet, release a cord which will turn the chute inside out and then reopen the chute before landing.

Yacht to Blame In River Crash, D.C. Man Avers

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 24.—Paul L. Kise, of 441 Tenth street northeast, Washington, a "surprise" witness in the investigation of the collision between the excursion steamer Potomac and a yacht in Potomac River Monday night, testified today the yacht sailed directly into the steamer's path.

Kise, a passenger on the 45-foot yacht Casino, owned by Alfred G. Schicht, told Steamboat Inspection Bureau investigators he and a young lady with him were thrown overboard by the collision.

He said the yacht was turning in mid-river when he saw the steamer approaching in the channel. The Casino headed across channel, Kise said, and he shouted: "Look out, there's a big boat coming!" The yacht continued on, he added, and the crash came a moment later.

He said he had time only to drag the young lady to her feet and that the impact knocked them into the water. Members of the Potomac's crew rescued them.

Kise testified further that Chester Lowe, one of the two young brothers acting as "crew" for Schicht aboard the Casino was helmsman at the time of the crash. Lowe is not licensed to pilot a passenger craft.

Earlier, Schicht had testified he was at the wheel himself and that the yacht had made its turn some time before the collision. The Potomac, he asserted, cut across the channel, blinded him with its searchlight, then blew a single blast on its whistle meaning "starboard rudder."

"If the Potomac had turned to its starboard, as its signal indicated, the collision would have been averted," Schicht asserted.

He denied statements by the steamer's officers that the yacht's riding lights were out and said he had checked them personally a short time before the accident.

The inquiry board took the case under advisement, pending a decision whether charges should be filed against officers of either vessel.

Bogus Police Get $500 'Bond' From Aged D.C. Victim

Palmiro Guiliani, 70, of 1360 C street northeast, Thursday was victimized by three men who posed as police officers, placed him under "arrest" and forced him to post $500 "bond."

Guiliani told Metropolitan police he was "arrested" by the three in the wash room of a down town hotel. They told him he must post a $500 bond for his appearance in court, and drove him to his home where he got a postal saving certificate for the amount. Then they took him to a postoffice where he signed and cashed the certificate. They told him they would be back yesterday to take him to court.

When the trio, ranging in age from 24 to 35 years, failed to reappear yesterday, Guiliani notified police.

President Puts 130,000 Under Civil Service

the career opportunity in Government. It follows Congress' action to extend at least a modified form of the merit system to first, second and third class postmasters.

Two features of the order appeared most welcome to employe representatives—the bringing of civil-service protections to non-classified workers—who long have clamored for it—and the creation of at least the machinery for a court of appeals.

All of the employe groups have, in principle, supported the extension of the merit system. And the order does blanket into civil service present jobholders who meet these conditions:

Pass a noncompetitive examination.

Preference to Veterans.

Preferences to veterans are allowed under the new orders, as heretofore.

Opportunities for promotion within the service by competition are greatly increased. Separate registers of employes eligible for promotion as a result of competition will be established and certified. Departments will be given priority of right to promote their own employes who establish eligibility. Transfer is subordinate to promotion wherever promotion is practicable.

The orders also provide for the first time for full medical and character investigation of all applicants prior to certification wherever practicable.

They also grant to the commission power to decide whether employes removed for cause should be considered for reinstatement under different working conditions in agencies other than those from which they were removed, and if so, to certify such as are in fact qualified for such reinstatement.

71,000 Workers Affected.

The affected jobs, generally, are those in the executive branch of the Government.

All of the highly paid positions heretofore excepted from competition by schedules A and B of the Civil Service rules must be reviewed within 90 days by the departments and agencies in which they are located and reasons presented to the President with the recommendation of the Civil Service Commission as to whether they should or should not be excepted from competition in the future.

New machinery is afforded to strengthen administration of the civil service system and to moderaize the rules and procedure. As of February 1, 1939, the heads of executive departments and independent agencies will be required to establish personnel divisions for professional supervision and management of employes. These divisions will be headed by a director of personnel. Each director will act as a liaison officer in all personnel matters between the executives, the employes and the commission, and supervise appointment, assignment, service rating and employe training "and establish means for the hearing and settlement of grievances of employes."

Personnel Council Set Up.

A council of personnel administration—consisting of the directors of personnel, a representative of the Bureau of the Budget and of the Civil Service Commission, along with such additional members as the President may designate, is created by the order. The chairman of the council will be appointed by the President. The Civil Service Commission will establish practical training courses for employes and provide credits in promotion examinations. Also in the order is provision for full medical and character investigation of all applicants prior to certification.

The order specifically provides for joint examinations and use of lists with other approved Federal, State and local agencies where desirable; provides for rerating interim experience of all eligibles who have been on a register over two years and elimination of those who do not file adequate current experience data; provides more flexible procedure for selective certification to meet the needs of the departments under safeguards; provides for a thorough check upon the conduct of employes during the probationary period requiring satisfactory rating by the departments before appointment can become permanent.

Restraints Tightened.

The tightening of restraints on political activity is embodied in a revised "rule I," entitled "Politics and Religion," which provides:

"1. No interference with elections.—No person in the executive civil service shall use his official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with an election or affecting the results thereof. Persons who by the provisions of these rules are in the competitive classified service, while retaining the right to vote as they please and to express privately their opinions on all political subjects, shall take no active part in political management or in political campaigns.

"2. No disclosure or distriminations.—No question in any form of application or in any examination shall be so framed as to elicit information concerning the political or religious opinions or affiliations of any applicant, nor shall any inquiry be made concerning such opinions or affiliations, and all disclosures thereof shall be discountenanced. No discrimination shall be exercised, threatened, or promised by any person in the executive civil service against or in favor of an applicant, eligible, or employe in the classified service because of his political or religious opinions or affiliations.

"3. Recommendations not considered.—No recommendation of an applicant, eligible, or employe in the classified service involving disclosure of his political or religious opinions or affiliations shall be considered or filed by the Civil Service Commission, hereinafter called the commission, or by any officer concerned in making appointments or promotions."

League Praises Move.

The National League of Women Voters yesterday telegraphed the President, as follows:

"On behalf of the National League of Women Voters which has persistently sought extension and improvement of the federal merit system I wish to express to you appreciation of the far-reaching possibilities for achieving this goal embodied in executive orders to extend the competitive classified civil service issued by you today. The extension of the merit system and the improvement of personnel administration thus made possible should largely correct defects in the present system and give impetus to enactment of legislation still required." (Signed: Mrs. Louise G. Baldwin, First Vice President.)

"Executive orders issued by President Roosevelt today providing for extending benefits of civil service to thousands of nonclassified employes, establishing in-service training programs for employes, directing establishment of a board of appeals, providing for strengthening of the probationary period and for promotions within the service, thus enhancing the opportunity for a career in the Government employ, should meet with the hearty approval of all believers in the merit system . . . We are particularly pleased that so many of the poorly paid Government employes are included in the scope of these orders, thereby gaining not only the benefits of the civil service laws, but also retirement privileges."

Jacob Baker, president, United Federal Workers of America, commented:

"The President has justified the faith of supporters of the reorganization bill by making possible the extension of civil service to more than 100,000 Federal employes. Revamping and modernizing ancient civil service regulations, the President's Executive order ought to put to shame the wolves who cried 'dictator' when the bill was under fire in Congress. Of course, the overhauling job is not complete. Wastefulness and inefficiency will not be totally wiped out by this laudable step, but the President has shown the way to do so."

G. O. P. Echoes Charge.

Coincidentally, the charge that Democratic leaders are using the Government pay roll to help finance party activities was re-echoed today by the Republican National Committee, which issued a statement saying that "the Democratic National Committee is again shaking down Federal employes in the lower-income brackets for campaign contributions."

"Oliver A. Quayle, jr., acting treasurer of the committee, some days ago by letter called on Federal workers 'to make your usual voluntary contribution of $5 or $10, or pledge $25 payable in two monthly installments, to help in this emergency,'" the Republican committee charged.

"But not all the Federal workers propose to let Mr. Quayle shake them down. With the Quayle letter in her hand, a middle-aged woman entered Republican national headquarters. Angrily she said: 'I can't give you my name because I want to keep my job, but here is $5 to be used by your Republicans to turn this New Deal out. I am not going to give Jim Farley a cent.'

"She quickly departed, leaving a $5 bill behind her. Since the lady would not give her name, the Republican National Treasurer has entered her contribution on his books as the gift of a 'New Deal employe.'"

Important Step Hailed.

The Executive orders were described by the National Federation of Federal Employes as "a long, important step toward placing Federal employment wholly on a merit basis and in improving Federal personnel administration."

"The orders," said President Luther C. Steward and Secretary-Treasurer Gertrude M. McNally, "accomplish an end for which the National Federation of Federal Employes has been working unremittingly and in close harmony with the most responsible officials of the Government.

"It is, of course, a source of regret that there are many positions which can be brought within the competitive classified system only by legislative enactment; for example, such as deputy collectors of internal revenue and positions in those newer agencies which were specifically exempted from civil service in the Congressional acts establishing them."

The statement said the federation would press for such legislation in the future.

Workless Relief Study Announced

A thorough study of present experience in administering unemployment relief, aimed at simplifying the existing system, was announced yesterday by the Social Security Board.

Undertaken by the bureau of unemployment compensation of the board, individual State agencies, and the interstate conference of unemployment compensation agencies, the study will aim at greater economy in unemployment insurance administration; development of methods for calculating and paying benefits which will be more easily understood; reduction of the volume of detail required of employers in complying with the legislation.

Boy Serving Life and Pair Whose Killing He Confessed

Associated Press Photos.

Paul Dwyer (center), 18, last fall confessed the slaying of Dr. James G. Littlefield (left) and Mrs. Littlefield (right), and was sentenced to life imprisonment. Yesterday, Francis M. Carroll, former deputy sheriff of South Paris, Me., was indicted for the murder of Dr. Littlefield. Carroll is the father of Dwyer's sweetheart.

Text of Civil Service Order

By virtue of and pursuant to the authority vested in me by the Constitution, by Section 1753 of the Revised statutes (U. S. C., Title 5, Section 631), by the Civil Service act of January 16, 1883 (22 Stat. 403), and as President of the United States, it is hereby ordered as follows:

Section 1. Effective February 1, 1939, all positions in the Executive civil service, including positions in corporations wholly owned or controlled by the United States, which are not now in the competitive classified civil service and which are not exempted therefrom by statute, except (1) policy-determining positions and (2) other positions which special circumstances require should be exempted, are covered into the competitive classified civil service: Provided, That this section shall not be deemed to apply to positions filled by appointment by and with the advice and consent of the Senate: And provided further, That no positions shall be exempted from the competitive classified service under clauses (1) and (2) above except such as shall be designated in subsequent Executive orders issued after investigation showing the necessity and justification for such exemptions. This section shall also apply to position affected by statutes which exempt them from the competitive classified civil service but authorize the President in his discretion to cover them into such service.

Section 2. Within 90 days from the date of this order the heads of all departments and independent establishments, including corporations wholly owned or controlled by the United States, whose personnel or any part thereof is affected by Section 1 of this order, shall certify to the Civil Service Commission for transmission by it with its recommendations to the President the positions in their respective departments or agencies which in their opinion should be excepted from the provisions of Section 1 of this order as policy-determining or for other reasons.

Section 3. The incumbent of any position which is covered into the competitive classified civil service by Section 1 of this order shall acquire a classified civil service status (1) upon recommendation by the head of the agency concerned and certification by such head to the Civil Service Commission that such incumbent was in the service on the date of this order and has rendered satisfactory service for not less than 6 months, and (2) upon passing a suitable noncompetitive examination prescribed by the Civil Service Commission under the civil service rules: Provided, That he is a citizen of the United States and is not disqualified by any provision of law or civil service rule. Any such incumbent who fails to meet the foregoing requirements of this section shall be separated from the service within 30 days (exclusive of leave to which he is entitled) after the commission reports that he is ineligible for classification unless the head of the agency concerned certifies to the commission that such incumbent has rendered satisfactory service and that he should be retained although without acquiring a competitive classified status.

Section 4. New appointments to any positions covered into the competitive classified civil service by section 1 of this order shall not be affected by the provisions of said section until the Civil Service Commission shall have established registers of eligibles for such positions as a result of examinations and with this order.

Section 5. The Civil Service Commission shall, subject to the civil-service act, the rules thereunder, and the classification act of 1923, as amended, initiate, supervise and enforce a system as uniform as practicable, for the recruitment, examination, certification, promotion from grade to grade, transfer and reinstatement of employes in the classified civil service, other than employes therein excepted by Executive orders, issued pursuant to clauses (1) and (2) of section 1 hereof, which system shall, so far as practicable, be competitive, with due regard to prior experience and service.

Section 6. Effective not later than February 1, 1939, the heads of the executive departments and the heads of such independent establishments and agencies subject to the civil service laws and rules as the President shall designate, shall establish in their respective departments or establishments a division of personnel supervision and management, at the head of which shall be appointed a director of personnel qualified by training and experience, from among those whose names are certified for such appointment by the Civil Service Commission pursuant to such competitive tests and requirements as the Civil Service Commission shall prescribe: Provided, however, that if the head of a department or establishment requests authority to appoint a presently acting personnel or appointment director, officer, or clerk, as such director of personnel, such personnel or appointment director, officer, or clerk may be appointed upon certification by the Civil Service Commission that he is qualified therefor after passing such tests as the Civil Service Commission shall prescribe. It shall be the duty of each director of personnel to act as liaison officer in personnel matters between his department or establishment and the Civil Service Commission, and to make recommendations to the departmental budget officer with respect to estimates and expenditures for personnel. He shall supervise the functions of appointment, assignment, service rating, and training of employees in his department or establishment, under direction of the head thereof, and shall initiate and supervise such programs of personnel training and management as the head thereof after consultation with the Civil Service Commission shall approve, including the establishment of a system of service ratings for departmental and field forces outside of the classification act of 1923, as amended, which shall conform as nearly as practicable with the system established under the said act. Subject to the approval of the head of such department or establishment and of the Civil Service Commission he shall establish means for the hearing of grievances of employes and present appropriate recommendations for the settlement thereof to the head of his department or establishment. He shall serve as a member of the Council of Personnel Administration hereinafter established, and perform such other functions as the head of the department or agency after consultation with the Civil Service Commission shall prescribe. A director of personnel may be transferred from one department or establishment to another from time to time, subject to the provisions of the civil service rules and with the approval of the head of the agency to which transfer is proposed.

Section 7. Effective February 1, 1939, there is established a Council of Personnel Administration consisting of the directors of personnel of the several departments and independent establishments, one additional representative of the Bureau of the Budget, one additional representative of the Civil Service Commission, and such additional members as the President shall designate. The President shall designate one of the members of the council to act as chairman thereof, and the council may designate an executive director. The council shall advise and assist the President and the commission in the protection and improvement of the merit system, and recommend from time to time to the President or the Commission needed changes in procedure, rules, or regulations. When directed so to do by the President or the Commission, the council shall hold hearings and conduct investigations with respect to alleged abuses and proposed changes. The council shall carry on programs of study to co-ordinate and perfect the executive personnel service in all its branches, and shall report upon the progress of personnel administration throughout the service. The council shall have an executive committee of five members: One representing the ten executive departments to be chosen by the directors of personnel thereof; one representing the independent establishments and agencies to be chosen by the Directors of Personnel thereof; one representing the Civil Service Commission to be chosen by it, and one to be designated by the President. Executive Order No. 5612 of April 25, 1931, is hereby revoked.

Section 8. The Civil Service Commission shall, in co-operation with operating departments and establishments, the Office of Education, and public and private institutions of learning, establish practical training courses for employes in the departmental and field services of the classified civil service, and may by regulations provide credits in transfer and promotion examinations for satisfactory completion of one or more of such training courses.

Section 9. Schedules A and B of the civil service rules, as presently existing, relating to positions excepted from examination and positions which may be filled upon noncompetitive examination, will be superseded by schedules designating policy-determining positions and other positions which special circumstances require should be exempted, which schedules will be set forth in subsequent Executive orders as provided in section 1 hereof.

rear of the physician's own automobile first were learned last October 16 from North Arlington, N. J.

Confession Alleged.

A patrolman, noticing Dwyer asleep at the wheel of the car, discovered the bodies.

The youth, police said, confessed slaying Dr. Littlefield, after the physician made a derogatory remark about Dwyer's "girl," whose name never was brought up.

Dwyer said he carried the body to the automobile and drove to the Littlefield home, where he told Mrs. Lydia Littlefield her husband had fled to Boston after killing two men with his car.

According to the confession, Dwyer killed Mrs. Littlefield when she became suspicious, placed her body in the tonneau covered it over with clothing, and drove to North Arlington.

Dwyer pleaded guilty of murder and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 24.—A projected around-the-world flight by Howard Hughes came a step nearer reality tonight when the speed flyer obtained formal permission from the Departments of Commerce and State for the New York-Paris leg of the journey and was named by Grover A. Whalen as official representative of the 1939 New York World's Fair on this phase of the venture.

Hughes' companions on the flight will be Harry P. Connor, navigator on Erroll Boyd's transatlantic flight; Lieut. Thomas Thurlow, another navigator now on leave from the Army Air Corps; Richard R. Stoddart, radio engineer, and Edward Lund, flight engineer. Final equipment installations are now being made in the plane at Burbank, Calif.

Hughes is expected to fly nonstop in his plane to Floyd Bennett Field next Tuesday or Wednesday, taking off for Paris two or three days later.

Landing Authorized.

Paris, June 24 (AP).—The United States Embassy today obtained a permit for the American aviator, Howard Hughes, to land at Le Bourget Airdrome "any day after today," on a nonstop flight from New York to Paris.

Rockville Pike Crash Kills Man; Driver Is Held

William Kemeys, 51, of 3 Clermont avenue, Garrett Park, Md., was killed last night when his automobile collided head on with a heavy truck on the Rockville pike at Montrose. Dr. William Welch, of Rockville, said his neck was broken.

Allen Jones, 36, colored, of 1523 Fifth street northwest, who was held on a technical charge of reckless driving as operator of the truck, said Kemeys pulled from behind an approaching automobile into the path of his truck. Jones was driving north with a load of corn.

Kemeys was a retired United States Army physician with the rank of major. He leaves his wife and two children.

Hotel Men Motor Here From Mexico

More than 30 Mexican hotel executives arrived here in a seven-car motor caravan yesterday and were received at the Pan American Union by Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general. The group later visited the White House and presented a parchment containing a good will message to the President from the people of Mexico.

Led by Antonio Perez, the group has visited a number of American cities and has just returned from the annual convention of the Hotel Greeters of America in Atlantic City. Mexico City was chosen as the 1939 convention city by the greeters organizatiotn.

Dr. Francisco Castillo-Najera, Mexican Ambassador, was the guest of honor at a banquet given the hotel men last night in the Mayflower Hotel. The caravan will leave here today for Pittsburgh and will visit other American cities before returning to Mexico.

Liquor Warning Given D. C. Clubs

A warning to all operators of clubs dispensing distilled spirits who refuse to permit police to enter their places of business for inspection purposes was issued yesterday by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

The board dealt mildly, however, with the proprietors of the Old Rose Social Club, in the 1800 block of Seventh street northwest, for such a violation. Recently two officers were refused admittance. The club's retail Class "C" license was suspended for one day from 8 a. m. Monday. This was the club's first offense.

wife, was in conclave in Paris with the countess' father.

She was said to have been told that, even though the count would be served with a warrant if he appeared at the gates of heavily guarded Winfield House in Regents Park, he would be able to obtain his release on bail quickly.

In such an event there would be no legal means of denying him access to the home which during the past few days has become a virtual fortress shielding the curly-haired child.

Had Him Shadowed.

It was understood that the countess and her advisers were fully acquainted with all the count's movements since he had been on the continent because of agents who have trailed him everywhere.

Two detectives of Scotland Yard, Supt. George Yandell and Divisional Detetective Inspector John Clares, were admitted to the heavily guarded Haugwitz-Reventlow town house in Regents Park and conferred with the heiress for half an hour.

They were believed to have discussed measures for the safety of the infant, playing on the grounds under the eyes of a nurse and several detectives.

A short time later Sir John Milbanke, head of the Milbanke Trust, Ltd., which is understood to control a large part of the former Barbara Hutton's vast fortune, was admitted to Winfield House by gate guards who had been notified in advance of his arrival.

Sir John's visit appeared to lend credence to Paris reports that the countess' investments were involved in the family differences, as well as a threat received by her saying the child might be taken from her.

Meanwhile in Paris the count left the Ritz Hotel with an unidentified blonde woman and Franklyn L. Hutton, father of the American-born countess, followed by two taxicabs loaded with bodyguards. The count returned alone later and then set out to consult an attorney.

Hutton was understood to be opposing, along with the countess, with whom he talked by telephone several times, the Danish count's supposed desire to see his wife's fortune invested in European rather than in American securities.

Countess Barbara today consulted her attorney, W. M. Mitchell, who advised her to obtain the warrant against the count in Bow Street Police Court before calling in the Scotland Yard and banking officials.

She'll Get No Favors.

By the United Press.

Immigration officials yesterday said Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow will be shown no special favors if she applies for citizenship. If she is lucky she may regain in three years the citizenship rights she abandoned last December 15. It may take as long as five years, officials said.

wrong doing on the part of Federal or State employes.

Other questions will include these points: contributions, gifts and services received; promises made of appointments to either public or private jobs; use of political patronage; use of Federal funds for political purposes; and information on the actions of any person receiving Federal compensation in influencing, coercing or intimidating employes under him for political purposes.

Sheppard said investigations would be made of complaints growing out of primaries already held, as well as future ones. The primary investigations, he said, are based on the Senate's power to inquire into the qualifications and determine the character of its members.

Sheppard said the committee can inquire into actions of State officials who may receive a portion of their compensation from the Government. These might include highway, social security and employment officers.

The Texas Senator said the activities of so-called "2 per cent" clubs, whose members donate 2 per cent of their public salaries to campaign funds, would be investigated if any of the members were receiving any compensation from the Government.

The questionnaire will be ready for final committee approval Tuesday, Sheppard said, and will be sent out to all primary candidates immediately.

He indicated that a chief counsel and secretary probably would be named at Tuesday's meeting, and that investigators may be picked from the list of applicants for jobs within the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Administration Intervenes in Virginia Race

The following statement was issued by Dodd:

"I have no comment to make on the stories in the press other than to say that I believe that President Roosevelt must have the support of the party of which he is the head. A divided party can only lead to disaster in 1940 and political impotence for the South.

"The issue is clear. I am for supporting the President. My opponent has a long record of fighting the President at every turn openly but more especially behind the scenes."

Dodd is expected to seek the backing also of Gov. Price, who was elected without the formal support of Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia. If Byrd figures in the Eighth District campaign at all, he is expected to support Smith. Byrd was not in Washington yesterday.

Although opposing many New Deal measures, Representative Smith has never personally attacked the President.

He was a member of the Rules Committee's conservative majority which twice denied the wage-hour bill right-of-way and forced leaders to petition it to the floor. He opposed the Government reorganization bill and "pump priming" spending. Smith is regarded as strongly entrenched politically in his district.

Second of the so-called "elimination" contests to attract local notice, the eighth Virginia race closely parallels Maryland's Democratic senatorial campaign, in which Representative David J. Lewis, with New Deal backing, is attempting to unseat Senator Millard E. Tydings.

for four or five days," he added.

While Mrs. Lewis' body was taken from the Hutchins undertaking establishment at Mount Harmony, 12 miles from here, to a funeral home in Washington, efforts were being made to obtain release of the Clarendon (Va.) conductor. His son-in-law conferred with Calvert County authorities.

The conductor, against whom no charge has been placed, yesterday told The Post he did not intend to employ an attorney because "I do not need any lawyer; I haven't done anything to need one."

His wife, indignant at his incarceration, indicated the family would take early action to obtain his release.

"This is a shocking thing," she said, "the way my husband has been treated. When the officers first came to our home, my husband explained to them that he was merely a casual friend of Mrs. Lewis.

Calls Treatment "a Shame."

"They asked him to accompany them to view her body to make certain if she was the woman, and he was glad to do that. Then, without any reason, they locked him up.

"We are buying our home and we haven't any money to waste on lawyers. But if we have to engage a lawyer we certainly will do so. But it does seem a shame for decent, God-fearing people to be treated this way."

Funeral services for Mrs. Lewis will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the Fort Myer gate of Arlington Cemetery, where she will be buried beside her husband, a veteran of two wars. Services will be conducted by the Rev. Louis Miltenberger, of St. Martin's Church.

Russian Aviators Honored in Berlin

Berlin, June 24 (AP).—Russia was accorded a special honor for her aviators today at the opening session of the International Aeronautic Federation Congress.

George Valentine Bibesco, president of Rumania, announced the award of the federation's gold medal to Mikhail Gromoff, Sergei Danilin and Andrei Yumosheff, who flew from Moscow via the North Pole to land at San Jacinto, Calif., on July 14, 1937. Aliens in China Not Privileged, Japanese Rule Spokesman Outlines Policy in Denying Sentry Slapped American.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, June 24.—A Japanese Embassy spokesman tonight declared that "third power nationals residing in Japanese-occupied territory (in China) do not enjoy special status because of their extraterritoriality."

He was making a formal denial of charges that a Japanese sentry at Nanking had slapped an American missionary. This version was that the sentry merely searched the American "in a quiet, routine manner" and that this was within his rights since Nanking was under military occupation "with no distinction between Chinese and foreigners" as far as military police functions were concerned.

U. S. Woman Is Slapped.

Dispatches reaching here Saturday said United States Consul Louis H. Gourley at Tsingtao had reported to the State Department a Japanese sentry slapped the wife of Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, attached to the United States gunboat Tulsa.

The report, from Tsingtao, said Mrs. Massie was returning to Tsingtao, escorted by two sailors, after visiting her husband on board the Tulsa. She landed at the Japanese-controlled pier and went on to the city, where she was challenged in Japanese by the sentry. When she failed to reply in Japanese, the report said the sentry struck her across the face.

Subject to Own Authorities.

By extraterritoriality the spokesman meant the rights many foreigners in China have enjoyed for a century of being dealt with by authorities of their own country when charged with law violations.

The Japanese spokesmen recalled that aliens had no special privileges in Japan and indicated they could expect none in the parts of China held by Japan's armies.

The embassy representative was discussing with news correspondents the charge made by J. C. Thompson, of New Brunswick, N. J., connected with Nanking University.

Cannot Be Favored.

John M. Allison, consul in charge of the United States embassy in Nanking, made representations to Japanese authorities there.

The Japanese spokesman's remarks generally were interpreted by his hearers as a restatement of claims made by many Japanese authorities that foreigners could not be favored in the application of general military precautions such as the questioning or search of individuals by the Japanese military.

Non-Japanese authorities pointed out that extraterritorial rights are entirely a matter of treaty arrangement between foreign powers and China and that the powers consider it still fully operative. Any foreigner actually arrested in Japanese-occupied areas in China still is expected to be turned over immediately to the authorities of his own country.

5,000 Japanese Land.

Hankow, China, June 24. (AP).—Japanese forces, driving up the Yangtze River toward this provisional Chinese capital, landed more than 5,000 men on the river's south shore near Anking today under cover of a heavy co-ordinated warship and airplane barrage.

With the ships blasting at Chinese defenses and the planes alternately bombing and strafing, infantrymen were put ashore 35 miles north of Anking, at a point 180 miles by river from Hankow.

Three hundred miles to the north, on the Honan Province front along the Lunghai Railway, the Chinese consolidated gains made in following up the retreat of Japanese forced back by the great Yellow River floods.

Chinese military strategists, it was reported, paid off farmers and townsfolk along the Yellow River at the rate of ten Chinese dollars ($1.77) an adult before deliberately flooding the region to drive back the indavers.

Encouraged by these successes as a result of the otherwise costly flood east of Chengchow, the Chinese were believed planning to smash the Yellow's dikes west of the city, upstream.

Quezon Warns Of Dangers in Church Dispute

Manila, P. I., June 24.—President Manuel L. Quezon issued a statement today condemning the pastoral letter in which the Roman Catholic bishops of the southern ecclesiastical province, two days ago, called on their priests to renew the campaign for a law providing compulsory religious instruction in schools. A measure to that end passed by the National Assembly was vetoed June 4 by President Quezon, a devout Catholic, as unconstitutional.

In his statement today, President Quezon declared the prelates were "interfering in a matter concerning the constitutional duties and prerogatives of officials of the branches of the Commonwealth government.

"It seems that the archbishop and the bishops are blind to the situation invariably created whenever the church authorities have attempted to interfere in affairs of state," he said, citing historic incidents.

"It is my earnest conviction," his statement concluded, "that the Filipino people will not heed the call to drag them into a religious controversy such as would result if the threats to wage anew another campaign to change the present status of optional religious instruction should be carried out.

"The fatal consequences of such a religious strife among the people should be horrifying to every Filipino, for it might convert this beloved land of ours into a battlefield stained with the blood of our own people."

Roosevelt Asks Funds.

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt came out yesterday in favor of more cash to detect and apprehend spies.

The President at his press conference, replied in the affirmative when he was asked whether recent charges of spying in this country additional funds for Army and Navy would make it desirable to provide counter-espionage.

The subject was brought up as a result of the recent indictment of 18 persons, 14 of whom are now in Germany, by a federal grand jury in New York.

The President expressed belief that appropriations for Army and Navy intelligence services had been held down pretty low.

Admiral William Leahy, chief of Naval Operations, who called at the White House, said that "not very much money" would be required to give the Navy a counter-espionage division able to perform efficient work.

Army and Navy officials asserted both branches of the service have intelligence sections whose activities include counter-espionage, but that no funds are specifically earmarked for the work.

The Army's intelligence section this year was given $80,000 in the War Department's appropriation bill for "special and miscellaneous contingent expenses," and $89,450 for running expenses.

The Navy has a discretionary fund at the disposal of the Secretary. Officials declined to disclose the amount, but it was reported to be $30,000 annually. The Navy's intelligence office was given $79,000 for salaries in the Navy Department appropriation bill.

The President, naming no name, also commented on the question of publishing a series of newspaper articles on the New York spy investigation, saying printing of the stories involved patriotism and ethics.

The stories, presumed to be those prepared by Leon G. Hurrou, G-man who directed the investigation and quit his job to write the series.

Publication of the spy stories has been delayed pending the outcome of a suit brought by the Government.

The President said the articles would seriously jeopardize prosecution.

Jews Made Liable To Forced Labor By Goering Edict

Vienna, June 24.—Compulsory work decreed by Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering will also affect the unemployed Jews in Austria. Owing to the wholesale dismissals of the last month, their number in Vienna alone is estimated at 40,000. Under the new regulations they will be liable to instant mobilization for tasks in greater Germany.

The compulsory service will not be restricted to manual labor. Already in the last month, Jewish doctors were sent from here to the Rhineland.

Another decree issued for Austria alone says public employes of the state and municipal services whose wives or husbands are Jewish can be left in active service.

Today the police president of Vienna forbade Jews to enter the city parks.

Japan Guarding War Casualties From the Public

Tokyo, June 24 (U.P.).—Japan is guarding information about casualties suffered by her armed forces in China with the same secrecy that surrounds her naval building program. No regular casualty lists are published.

Official figures, as revealed by the war office for publication outside Japan, are 30,000 dead and 70,000 wounded, which military attaches believe to be far below the real figures.

So far as the Japanese public is concerned, the figure up to June 15 was given as around 10,000 total casualties.

Families of the war dead are notified by telegram, but the messages frequently arrive simultaneously with a notification to call at the home army division headquarters for the ashes of the dead.

Reich Must Give U.S. Debt Parity in Austria, Hull Says

By the Associated Press

Secretary Hull indicated yesterday that this Government would insist that Germany accord the United States equal treatment with Great Britain and other powers in any settlement of Austria's debts.

Germany has argued that it was easier to pay British and French creditors than Americans because the German balance of trade was favorable in the case of those countries and unfavorable in the case of the United States.

Franco Hurls Two Columns Upon Valencia

Small Towns Fall, but Loyalists Say Miaja Still Has Control.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, June 24.—Gen. Franco's eastern Spanish armies drove two spearheads today toward Valencia.

One force swung around Sarrion, 22 miles southeast of Teruel, capturing a number of small towns. Sarrion is on the main Teruel-Mediterranean highway, 44 miles northwest of Sagunto, where a coastal highway leads 16 miles south to Valencia.

Twelve miles inland, another insurgent force pushed forward south of Onda, 35 mile snorth of Valencia.

The government said Gen. Jose Miaja's troops still were holding the Sierra de Espadan, whose heights dominate the coastal sector.

The Very Rev. Gaetano Cicognani today presented his credentials as papal nuncio to insurgent Spain to Gen. Franco. The new Portuguese envoy, Dr. Pedro Pereira, also presented credentials today.

Mexicans Ask Exile of Jews In Silk Trade

Union Charges They Came Into Country Under False Pretenses.

By the United Press.

Mexico City, June 24.—Rising anti-Semitic feeling throughout Mexico was climaxed tonight with a demand by the Mexican Workers Confederation, strongest labor group in the country, for the deportation of Jewish owners of small silk and rayon establishments.

The confederation's demand accused the Jews of "being responsible for the crisis prevailing" in the strike-bound silk and rayon industry.

The union charged a majority of the 15,000 Jews in Mexico entered the republic under false pretenses. The Jews promised to become farmers, but instead became merchants, factory owners and bankers, the union said.

The press recently engaged in an anti-Semitic campaign, criticizing a project to settle a group of Austrian refugees in Mexico. The attacks were based apparently on a false report that a specially chartered steamship was about to land 1,300 Jews at Vera Cruz.

Recently in Hermosillo, Sonora State, Jewish residents appealed for protection to Gov. Roman Yocupicio after several were attacked by "Green Shirts."

Silk and rayon factory owners offered to hand over their establishments to the government on Wednesday unless they were permitted to operate a three-day working week.

No Real Militarism Here.

In these days of high-pressure militarism in many parts of the world American citizens have special cause to appreciate the lack of that dangerous tendency in our own Department of War. So far as the building of naval and air craft and improvement of military equipment is concerned, this country is to a limited extent duplicating foreign war preparations. But attempts to develop a war machine for the defense of some ideology are entirely lacking here.

The subordination of the military in the American form of government was appropriately noted by Assistant Secretary of War Johnson in his address at the commencement exercises of the Army War College. He reminded the graduates that no effort had been made to foist any doctrines upon them or to regiment their thinking in the military mold. He asked them to remember that the life of the Army in a democratic country depends entirely upon the will of Congress. The War Department is a creature of law subject to the will of voters, and not the directing influence in the government.

In the same spirit Mr. Johnson reminded the graduates that they had been recruited from the families of farmers, workers and professional men; that "Army officers are not a special class, separate from the rest of the body politic." "You may be a member of the military service," he said, "but first of all you are a citizen of a great peace-loving country. The ultimate success of your job will depend on the co-operation of peace-loving citizens."

To this sensible advice Mr. Johnson added: "Do not confuse love of peace with pacifism or national defense with militarism." He has accurately interpreted the American attitude of hatred for war accompanied by unwillingness to accept peace at any price.

In view of the militaristic frenzy to which some other countries are subjected, the United States may congratulate itself on two significant facts: The subordination of the War Department to civil authorities is thoroughly established. And that department itself appears to be guided by some such slogan as "peace without pacifism, national defense without militarism."

The British Labor Study.

President Roosevelt's committee of nine to study labor relations in England and Sweden appears to have a far more important mission than was first indicated by the White House. The carefully selected personnel of the committee suggests that its findings and report may have a considerable bearing upon future labor policies in this country.

In announcing the study the President told reporters that it was designed to clear up misinformation in this country about the British trade union act. A week later he wrote Chairman Hatton Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee that he had no intention of appointing a committee to investigate the operations of the Wagner labor relations act. "I am solely interested," the President wrote, "in securing a report on the status of industrial relations in Great Britain with particular emphasis on the functioning of collective agreements, in order that certain misconceptions may be clarified."

It is not necessary, however, to send a group of nine executives and experts, representing business, labor, education and government, across the Atlantic merely to correct misinformation regarding British labor relations. That could be done by a single expert in the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The high caliber of the delegation which the President has named suggests that the report may become the basis for modification of the American policy in handling labor relations.

Perhaps one reason for the aura of mystery surrounding the task assigned to the committee is the attitude of John L. Lewis. The C. I. O. leader withdrew his acceptance of an invitation to be represented on the committee out of fear that it might be used as a first step toward modification of the Wagner act. He clearly indicated that the C. I. O. is not interested in facts regarding labor disputes but only in preservation of the law as it stands. In these circumstances it is far better that no C. I. O. representative was included in the delegation.

With Mr. Lewis and his followers inclined to boycott the inquiry in any event, there seems to be no reason why its full significance should not be officially recognized. An excellent committee has been chosen. It will study employer-employe relations in two countries which have achieved greater stability in this respect than has the United States. As part of the recovery movement, more effective methods of handling labor disputes here are urgently needed. Undoubtedly the committee will be in a position to throw considerable light on this problem. To consider its inquiry merely from the academic viewpoint would be a sheer waste of time.

President And Primaries.

The President was in good form last night. To his huge unseen audience he gave an address eminently suitable for a summer evening. It was short, simple and self-confident. A few wise-cracks were included and it goes without saying that the delivery was excellent. Parts of the address, such as the thinly-veiled excoriation of Mayor Hague, will meet with unanimous approval. There is the ring of permanence to the fine statement that "the American people will not be deceived by anyone who attempts to suppress individual liberty under the pretense of patriotism."

Public interest will be most strongly aroused not by that part of the speech defined as a "report on the progress of national affairs" but by the digression on the subject of the coming primary elections and possible executive intervention therein. As President of the United States Mr. Roosevelt promises that he will take no part in Democratic primaries. But "as the head of the Democratic Party" he may do so whenever "liberal principles" are involved. The distinction is somewhat subtle for all but very trusting minds. It will, however, set all the Democratic candidates wondering as to where they stand on this seemingly vital matter of liberal and conservative.

The important question for the primary voter, said President Roosevelt (speaking as Mr. Roosevelt) is: "To which of these general schools of thought does the candidate belong?" And he endeavored to assist definition by asserting that "Roughly speaking, the liberal school of thought recognizes that the new conditions throughout the world call for new remedies."

Candor compels the admission that the more this assertion is examined the more confusing it becomes. For, on the one hand, the Communists and Fascists, properly excoriated as anti-liberal by the President, have undeniably attempted to meet new conditions by new remedies. And, on the other hand, most of the fundamental aspects of Mr. Roosevelt's own program cannot by any stretch of the imagination be called new. Continuous deficit financing, for instance, is a practice at least as old as the Babylonian Empire. Public works as a cure for unemployment were assiduously undertaken in ancient Rome. And devaluation of the currency by governmental edict is so hoary as a revenue-raising device that its origin is lost in the mists of history.

The problem confronting Democratic candidates in the primaries is intensified by the President's definition of conservatism as a school of thought which "does not recognize the need for government itself to step in and take action to meet these new problems." But if that is the criterion the Communists ought to be the perfect liberals, for they believe that government should handle everything. Yet he who "leans in the direction of Communism," says Mr. Roosevelt, is a "wild man."

The President has made the choice in the forthcoming primaries a difficult one for conscientious voters of his own party. He said last night that he reserves the right to intervene when the principles of the 1936 Democratic platform seem in jeopardy. But the one of those principles which seems most endangered is that which said: "We (the Democratic Party) are determined to reduce the expenses of government." And those who opposed the bill to enlarge the Court certainly did not take issue with the 1936 platform, for it contained no hint of any such attempt.

Reduced to essentials the President seemed to say last night that he plans to make his own definition of what is liberal and what is conservative, his own interpretation of what is important in the 1936 platform, the acid test of party regularity. In view of the tremendous power exerted by the executive through its control over relief expenditures this is a pronouncement of the first magnitude. It will give those who were Democrats before Chicago, those reared in the democratic traditions of the party, cause for much anxious thought.

Sauce For The Goose.

Cut-throat competition in the public utility field is inexcusable. Especially when private companies build "spite lines" into areas that are being developed by the Rural Electrification Administration, there is ample cause for protest. Administrator Carmody's denunciation of this "jungle activity" will be applauded, not only by friends of the REA, but also by those who believe in fairness and decency in such public-private relationships.

If this type of competition should be permitted, some of the REA projects might be seriously jeopardized. That agency aims to serve areas not heretofore provided with electricity. But if private companies step in with lines of their own reaching the most accessible parts of these areas, they will provide inadequate service and, as Mr. Carmody says, destroy "the feasibility of projects on which the Federal Government made loans in good faith."

In short, a few utilities appear to be jeopardizing the Government's enterprises by unfair competition in the distribution of power. Those tactics are anti-social and unscrupulous. The only circumstance which tends to weaken REA's case is the fact that similar tactics are being used by some other Government agencies against private power companies.

The REA does not complain that any of its competitors are being given 45 per cent grants to aid the duplication of its facilities. It may at least be thankful that the private "raiders" do not have the United States Treasury behind them. Indeed, when compared with the granting of PWA funds to municipalities for the construction of power systems that will compete on unequal terms with private companies, the "feudal" activities of the raiding companies appear mild by comparison.

Outrageous as these latest developments appear when standing alone, therefore, they are chiefly significant as an indication that "raiding" is a game which more than one party can play.

Chamberlain At Bay.

Twice during the present week the House of Commons rejected a Labor Party motion for a vote of censure of the Chamberlain government for doing little or nothing to prevent further Spanish Nationalist attacks on British shipping. Last Monday the vote was 278 to 148. On Thursday it was 275 to 141.

It is obvious from these figures that even without polling its full strength of around 425 seats the Chamberlain government continues to command an ample majority in Parliament. But this week's parliamentary divisions by no means tell the whole story.

The truth of the matter is that Premier Chamberlain has maneuvered himself into an extremely awkward position by proclaiming his unwillingness to take any measures to stop the bombing of British merchant vessels engaged in commerce with Republican Spain. He may be entirely right in his argument that measures adequate to prevent such outrages may have dangerous consequences for the peace of Europe. The fact remains that his stand has obviously encouraged Franco or his backers to ignore British verbal protests. A few hours after Monday's debate in the House, two more vessels flying the Union Jack were bombed.

No wonder, then, that Chamberlain has been subjected to withering attack from the opposition. And whatever his nominal majority it is probable that unless the attacks on British ships cease the Conservative government will lose many supporters who have always been inclined to look to that party as a resolute guardian of national prestige.

Traditions continue to count for something in Great Britain and among the oldest of those traditions is adequate protection for British shipping. To fail in that particular is to create a dangerous precedent for a nation which is so peculiarly dependent on the outside world not only for essential raw materials but also for its food supply.

What makes the Chamberlain position all the more difficult is that his hesitation to apply any strong measures against Franco clearly arises out of his fear of offending Mussolini, with whom last April the British government signed a comprehensive agreement designed to establish real friendship between the two nations. Yet it is a boast of the Italian press that the planes and fliers responsible for the attacks on British ships are in at least some cases of Italian origin.

To a large number of embittered Englishmen a treaty of friendship which produces such unfriendly consequences is hardly one to which an historic British policy should be subordinated.

At The Expense Of Safety.

Last Sunday a tragic railway accident in the far West took a heavy toll of life. A few days later several freight cars were derailed in nearby Maryland, fortunately without injury to anybody. It may be a mere coincidence that these accidents should come at a time when the railroads are cutting down outlays for maintenance of way—in other words, economizing at the expense of safety. The bridge that failed to withstand a cloudburst, the faulty truck that tied up railroad traffic on the Pennsylvania Railroad might have failed in any case. Nevertheless, accidents of this sort make the public realize the importance of keeping roadbeds, tracks and equipment in good repair.

From official statistics published yesterday in The Post it is evident that upkeep is being neglected at present. In April, for instance, the last month for which returns are available, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, on which occurred the disastrous wreck costing the lives of at least 40 persons, spent only $859,000 for upkeep as compared with $1,495,000 in April, 1937. The Pennsylvania cut its upkeep outlays from $4,065,000 in April a year ago to $2,783,000. The roads as a whole spent $9,000,000 less in April for such purposes—a reduction of over 21 per cent.

Not only the maintenance of way workers laid off because of these economies but the public too pays a heavy price for any neglect of essential upkeep. This record provides another strong argument for reduction of operating costs by less hazardous means.

Espionage Revelations.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To those citizens of ours who believe in America's shutting herself out of the European picture and to those Congressmen and Senators who think that the Atlantic and Pacific oceans are impregnable guarantors of isolation, the recent exposure of Nazi espionage in the United States must be as shocking as sudden contact with a high tension wire.

Although we may abhor bloodshed and renounce violence, yet we can not wait until Nazi Germany, fattened and fortified by the blood of the other European democracies which one by one it threatens to absorb, shall cross the Atlantic. Not in tens on luxury liners but in thousands on battleships. Why else would they want the military secrets of a country 3,000 miles removed?

We can crush the head of the Fascist octopus now—in Spain, in Czechoslovakia—by repealing our neutrality laws, by helping democracy wherever it is threatened and in whatever part of the world. Crush the head of Nazism and its tentacles will wither away and free humanity from its oppressive and fatal grip.

MORTON JEROME JACOBS.

Prediction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Better times are coming. The stock market has signaled a major upswing. Leading stocks will sell from 10 to 100 points higher within two years. Roosevelt's popularity will increase from now on, until by 1940 he will be a popular hero and a third term will be forced upon him.

Unfortunately the coming prosperity will be largely artificial and will eventually collapse unless unemployment is eliminated.

Street Scene.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The fifth man to approach me on the downtown streets last night for help to get "a bite to eat," "a night's flop," or to get "back home" was a miner from West Virginia.

"I'm not in very good shape myself, buddy," I countered, "and they are coming too fast for me!"

"We're in a hell of a fix, ain't we," he asked aggressively; and I could not deny it. Idle for six months in West Virginia, he had picked up two weeks' work in Pennsylvania before he came here. While his vocabulary was limited, he had a stock of "off the record" adjectives for the government that "don't do anything."

"These terms do not mean a thing," I parried.

"This here Nazi Party is strongly organized in New York and California and other States," he said with enthusiasm, "and they've got what it takes to fix things up!" A fanatical zeal was becoming evident as he declared the necessity for driving the "Greeks and Jews" out of the country. I taunted him for this misinformed and restricted view of a miner who had tramped as far as the Capital.

"What the hell are you, a Jew?" he demanded. Assuring him that I was not a Jew, and adding my candid and gratuitous appraisal of himself, he moved away—declaiming angrily that he was "a Swede," that Hitler is our hope; that the Nazi "party" would cure things!

I record this because it proves that such insidious propaganda is effective in underprivileged communities — multiplied, how many times? In the miner's territory the agitators probably found it helpful to link Greeks with Jews. Is this propaganda alien Nazi or indigenous Fascist?

It is difficult to get this sector of our economic problem into the view of astigmatic snipers at the President's attempts to avoid a cataclysm but it is referred to some of the earnest correspondents.

"Higher Standards For The Bar."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with deep regret that I read your editorial of June 22, favoring higher standards for the bar. According to this, by "higher standards" you refer to spending two or more years attending college prior to taking up the study of law.

When doctors and dentists attend college for a certain length of time before beginning their professional training, they are working toward their goal by the study of subjects essential to their training. But why should a person who intends to study law be required to pursue the study of subjects entirely separate from legal training? Why must his study of the law be so delayed, merely because other States have built such a barrier against young men and women bettering themselves with minimum expense of time and money?

By raising such requirements, the bar association will cause the law aspirant to waste two years of his life, perhaps pursuing a "playboy" course to attain the required prelegal knowledge.

EDWARD M. J. GOWEN.
Washington, June 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of June 22 on behalf of raising the educational standards of the legal profession, which proposition is now under consideration by the District Bar Association, points out that at least two years of collegiate study or its equivalent are required in 36 of the States. Your plea that the District should lead them rather than trail behind is commendable.

Cicero was the classical example of how the best education obtainable built the foundation for his brilliant career at the bar. In our own day such names as Webster, Choate and Beck come to mind as forensic leaders whose liberal education gave them their preeminence.

For practicing attorneys, as well as administrative lawyers in the Government's service, only two years at college are little enough preparation for the study of law. The American haste to make money rather than the acquisition of knowledge has probably been the cause of our lagging behind Europe in regard to what constitutes proper academic training before beginning professional studies.

It is hoped that a well-rounded course of study of at least four years' duration will eventually be the sine qua non for admission to the bar in order to safeguard the legal profession from sheer incompetence.

FIDES.
Arlington, Va., June 22.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of June 22 entitled "Higher Standards for the Bar" was most enlightening, but it left many of the pertinent facts unstated.

For example, in 1921 the American Bar Association (of which the District Bar Association is a member) adopted the following resolution:

. . . it is essential that the legal profession should not become the monopoly of any economic class . . .

In 1927 the association further explained itself by adding the following to the 1921 resolution:

. . . we recommend the establishment in each State, where none now exists, of opportunities for a collegiate training, free or at a moderate cost, so that all deserving young men and women seeking admission to the bar, may obtain an adequate preliminary education . . .

To date the District Bar Association has made no move in that direction. They are disobeying the dictates of their "mother" association and are in a sense "putting the cart before the horse." The association has shown the student no way in which he may obtain a prelegal education at a moderate cost.

If the association was really sincere in its efforts to improve the caliber of lawyers it would first "lay the required foundation" by providing, or attempting to provide, a means by which the average night school student could obtain the required two years preparatory education.

Night school students are anxious to improve themselves by obtaining a so-called "cultural education" and if shown the way they will do it.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My attention has been directed to an editorial in The Post of June 22, entitled "Higher Standards for the Bar," which is in favor of increasing the requirements of the District bar examination.

As a student in one of the larger local night law schools I wish to protest against this writing. The District bar is rated one of the highest in the United States, and one of the hardest for the struggling younger generation to pass. This should be taken into consideration.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to take issue with your editorial, "Higher Standards for the Bar."

This means abolition of that great institution — the American night school. This cannot be, for to do so would amount to a direct infringement of the heritage of this land, freedom.

I am a graduate of one of these schools. The position I now hold is a direct result of this teaching. Would you have deprived me of this opportunity? I think not. So why deny it to those to come?

"Olympian" Wreck.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The heroic action of Lewis Williams, porter on the "Olympian," must go down as one of the greatest public services recorded in the turbulent history of the American railroad.

Oblivious to personal danger, Porter Williams remained inside his teetering Pullman car to assist every occupant to safety—then alighted only a few seconds before the car slipped over the trestle's edge and hurtled to the river below. How many of us would have done the same in the face of almost certain death?

A banker, rescued by Mr. Williams, said he would seek to have the Carnegie hero award conferred upon him. However commendable this may be, in five minutes of heroic endurance Porter Williams did more to carve his name into railroad history than an expert medal engraver could do perhaps with the most modern and expensive of instruments. ROBERTSON PAGE.
Washington, June 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We read of a terrible railroad wreck in Montana. This wreck takes us back to the old days when such were frequent. There can be no good excuse for such wrecks if we had more attention to the traveling public in general instead of more attention by one official to another.

It is common in railroad life to see a lesser official looking after his superior, and so on up the line, whereas they should be looking after the paying public at all times instead of their own personal interest. When this is done we may see better railroading. Let us cut out all the high-hat official business.

The Post Impressionist

Les Artistes.

WASHINGTON is situated on the left bank, no matter that it's the Potomac's bank. Potomac or Seine, Left Bank is in the air and the cross-section Washingtonian is very artiste.

That may be true of all America, but I know about Washington. It's an observation you might never make unless you happen to be painting a landscape, or sculpting a fawn or something. Me, I'm writing a book. As a result, I can't leave a note for the milkman without having him tell me he likes my style.

There's no way that a laborer in Minerva's vineyard can avoid getting enfolded in one sticky Washington bosom after another. Washington, I find, has a fixed attitude toward the arts, or toward me as artist. Toward me as employe, taxpayer, automobilist, Washington shows its usual face with its normal snarl. But of me as creative worker, Washington is fond. Gushingly.

This evening, for instance. We have one of these insurance policies that people buy to rid their premises of a disturbing element. It turns out to be an extremely unwise thing to do, because the element will pop up again to collect right in the middle of something every week from then until Doomsday. We've modified that evil by keeping the policy paid up a year in advance. I don't expect anybody to die anyhow; and I consider this expedient one of my major strategic victories over life.

But this evening the year rolled round and up popped the element, right in the middle, of course, of a passage to make you swoon with delight. My wife had him brought to me because, she alleged, she was dressing—a pretty transparent excuse, I thought.

There I was definitely on the spot, alone with what for me amounts to a devouring monster, a wolf that hasn't eaten today but at last smells a woolly defenseless lamb. I quaked as I wrote his check and did my best to keep from bleating. I could feel his eye hungrily fixed on me, his whole attitude sternly proclaiming that I needed more what they call protection. Hah!

But when I looked up to hand him his check, lo, the metamorphosis! His eyes had a dreamy look and his features were relaxed in a kindly smile, slightly on the insipid side.

He was staring at my manuscript.

"You writing a book, Bud?" he asked, benevolently.

"Aw," I said, deprecatingly. "Just writing at it." It seemed pretty improbable that the little lamb could have the monster awed.

"Gee!" he said.

"Aw!" I said again, as if really there was nothing to it.

"Got any PUBLISHED?" he said.

Here, I could see, I was about to lose ground. "Well, not exactly," I had to confess.

"What do you mean, not exactly?" he pressed on.

"Well, there's a publisher waiting for it."

"Yeah?" he said. It was pleasant to note that I had succeeded in giving him the impression that the presses of the country were being held up while I finished my work. A man daydreams about just such situations.

"Golly!" he said. "Say, what's it about?"

"Oh, it's about this guy."

"Yeah?" he said. "Gee, it sounds swell."

"Aw," I said, writhing with the purest pleasure mortal can know.

But through all that, the basis of my thesis gleams forth: The cross-section Washingtonian has a special attitude toward the arts. If I had been working in quantum mathematics, or perfecting a new air compressor do you think I would have gotten away with it? Not on your life. That fiend would have left my house to go brag among his colleagues about—O boy! You should have seen me load the old dope up with a bunch of new insurance! A pushover if ever I saw one!

But as it was, he not only relented but proceeded to show me the finer side of his nature. He turned out to be an urbane, polished gentleman with a nice taste in literature. Judging by his appreciation of Chapter Four I would say that his is one of the keenest intellects I've ever met. For, of course, I read him Chapter Four. In fact, when he asked me to read him something, I started on Chapter One, and read right on through. The poor dope in his innocence had no way of knowing that I haven't been able to find anybody to listen for the last six months. I kept him pinned there right through to the last immortal passage and he never even squirmed.

In fact, I would say, a pushover if I ever saw one.

The Things That Really Matter.

The contract to provide hamburgers and hot dogs at the New York World's Fair has been signed. That gets practically the most important feature of any big event like this out of the way.

• • • •

You can sort of trust to luck in the educational values of a world's fair and take chances on the artistic and financial aspects, but when it comes down to a hot frank and roll you have got to be careful.

• • • •

One of the country's biggest restaurant chains was given the hamburger and hot dog concession after one of the most imposing conferences to date. Newspapermen waited outside the office in breathless suspense. When the contract was announced the news was flashed by press and radio to all parts of the globe.

• • • •

• • • •

It was announced by the statisticians that 30,000,000 hot dogs and hamburgers would be consumed during the fair. Before he could be stopped some fellow got busy with pencil and paper and estimated that this would be enough frankfurters to stretch from New York to London if put end to end. (With or without mustard.—Editor's note.)

• • • •

No official statement on this point has come from the world's fair publicity chiefs, but it seems pretty certain that the hamburgers and weenies will in design, atmosphere and texture be on a higher plane than orthodox hamburgers and weenies. They will be something worthy of the exposition.

• • • •

Already some of the Nation's outstanding artists are at work on designs for a new hot dog, reflecting, perhaps, the peristyle influence. And 12 designers who have done work for the Moscow Theater Group are experimenting with plans for a modernistic hamburger (on white or rye).

• • • •

"It is possible," declared Grover Whalen, boss of the fair today, "for a hot dog to have that certain something, and there is no reason why a hamburger should not have distinction."

• • • •

It makes us pretty apprehensive. We fear we are about to hear of a frankfurter and roll "with charm."

Canton Air Raid

By Franklin P. Metcalf

Letter From China.

Canton, June 6.

YESTERDAY Canton experienced the worst air raid thus far in the war. From 60 to 100 bombs were dropped, mostly from over 10,000 feet or higher. They missed the Sunyatsen Memorial as well as the Municipal Building and the Kwangtung Provincial Government offices. But they hit the Kwangtung Provincial Bank and Treasury Building. The bombs, for the most part, landed in the residential quarter. The estimate is over 1,000 killed and wounded, and in many places, they still are digging people out.

The second raid was not quite so bad as the visibility was better and the AA batteries were therefore more accurate. A third raid came at 4 p. m. but no planes reached the city.

I took the 5:30 launch to the city to do some necessary shopping and to see conditions for myself. Many places were roped off and only half of the shops were open. I was unable to purchase what I wanted. I had just finished bargaining with a rickshaw coolie to take me to Big Bridge (near which a number of bombs had been dropped) and he had agreed for two dimes which was too much! Just then the first signal (6:35) for the fourth alarm of the day sounded. I was near The Sun, on the corner of Wing-an-lo. Bombs that morning had dropped the whole length of Wing-an-lo. The first real panic I had observed broke out.

Everybody was startled from leisurely walking, shopping and sightseeing. Ninety per cent of the people ran westward toward Shameen (which is supposed to be reasonably safe). If the planes came in directly, there is about 12 to 15 minutes before they are over the city. Such a bedlam. One of the students told me he thought over 5,000 people crowded into the Columbus Cafe, a new concrete 6-story building. If that was ever hit by a 500-pound bomb what a holocaust that would be!

My rickshaw coolie at once raised his price to four dimes. I asked why. He said because that place was dangerous, he didn't want to go that way. I argued and finally decided to go to the Lingnan matau (wharf) instead, for the two dimes. Very few were going that way. I passed the fire department and they were all getting ready. Farther along in a poor section, people were flocking to the ground floor of stores and apartment houses of more than four floors. Four floors of concrete are supposed to be a reasonable protection.

The launch came in at 6:55. And all this for one bomber plane (I found out today) reported near Sheklung coming toward Canton. When we arrived at Lingnan we heard that the all-off had sounded (7:15), but it was real. Who knows when or how they will come or where they will hit?

• • • •

TODAY (Sunday) the air alarm blew at 11:25. Some 22 planes came into the city, bombers guarded by patroling persuit planes. Wongsha Railroad Station and again on both sides of Sunyatsen Memorial and government buildings—maybe 15 to 20 bombs. Latest report is 500 casualities. When will they stop: Will Canton become another Madrid.

No more raids today. I still had that shopping to do and there still was time after the alarm to get somewhere, so I took the 4:30 launch and proceeded to Sincere & Co. and found what I wanted. They were open! In fact, business seemed almost as usual, except for the crowds of mothers and babies on the sidewalk under every high building, where they stay all day, eating, sleeping, etc. The streets were crowded, there was no panic. I did, however, see many with baggage on the way to the boats; thousands have left, every train and boat is crowded with people going out, but crowds remain.

I took rickshaws when buses were too few. A man became tired, I paid him off, walked a way and took another. I visited almost all the bombed places within the city. From a normal residential or shop section, one suddenly sees a view of destroyed buildings like old Verdun in the World War—such destruction! Such was Wongsha Station, like so many I remember in 1918. Whole blocks razed to the ground. Red Cross wagons, Boy Scouts, nurses in blue uniform, soldiers and policemen, all at work taking care of the dead and wounded.

From Wongsha I went to Lichee-wan and the Hacket Medical College. Bombs on all sides and one between two of the medical buildings. To Saichuen and the Flower Pagoda. Here again endless destruction. Then to the beautiful memorial, the municipal guest house and the provincial headquarters. One bomb hit the back of the beautiful memorial building, hitting a corner and destroying many windows. The Lingnan Hotel has been hit three times. A block or two in every direction whole areas of residential buildings have been obstructed. On again to Fat-Ching-lo and still more destruction.

Is this war by a civilized nation? Is there no way to stop this carnage? What has become of the treaties the United States and Britain signed to help China in a case like this?

Daladier Government Stands Firm As Majority In Socialist Party Congress Agree To Postpone Opposition.

By Jacques Kayser.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

THE MOST IMPORTANT event in France in the first two weeks of June was the meeting of the Socialist Party Congress at Royan. The Socialists are the most powerful group in the Chamber of Deputies, numbering at this time 156 out of a total of 617. Socialists in Parliament are obliged to follow the instructions of the congress.

The debates of the congress revealed three divisions of opinion within the party. One of these was extremist, revolutionary, hostile to any concession to the capitalist regime. The leading spirits of this wing were expelled several weeks ago from the Socialist Federation of the Seine where they were accused of attempting to create a party within the party. Their leader, Marceau Pivert, discovering during the debates of the congress that he and his friends were a minority which could muster a mere 1,430 votes against 6,600 announced that he would put a new party into the field—"A Workers and Peasants Socialist Party" which already has begun to take on a strong Trotskyist flavor. Barring a sudden aggravation of the economic crisis, it is unlikely that this new party will play any important role, except perhaps in the workingmen's quarters of the Parisian district.

Another group in the congress centered about the powerful and passionate orator Zyromsky. Zyromsky agrees that under present circumstances powerful concessions must be made in the interests of national defense. But he considers that the only effective means of dealing with the menace of fascism, is through force applied within and without France. He believes that the bourgeois government of Daladier is weak and he asked the Socialists to vote against it in order to put a more powerful Socialist government in its place. Zyromsky's views were supported by about 1,700 votes in the congress.

Blum Leads Majority To Minimize Opposition.

THE THIRD GROUP represented the majority—about 4,800 votes. These included all the great figures of the Socialist Party with Leon Blum the leader. And it was a moving speech by M. Blum, lasting the entire morning of the final day, which influenced the final decision of the congress after it had been much disturbed by the arguments of Zyromsky.

M. Blum's thesis was a simple one. It could be summed up thus: "The policy of the Daladier government does not satisfy us. If we were in its place we should adopt another policy. But it is not now possible for us to return to power. For two months we should be subjected to a very violent opposition and our tenure would not be for long. At this moment we must avoid doing anything that might weaken our position in the eyes of foreigners friendly to France. A ministerial crisis at this time would encourage the enemies of France and the enemies of peace and of liberty. This consideration should suffice to dictate the course of the Socialist Party."

Such were the reasons which decided the congress to do nothing to encourage the world forces which are working toward the destruction of freedom and peace.

Peace! French opinion becomes more and more preoccupied with this subject, and secondary political considerations are forgotten. The country, however, remains calm.

I had occasion recently to spend several days in the vicinity of one of the great industrial cities of the east, close to the German frontier. A year ago I found the population greatly disturbed and alarmed. This time, despite the fact that the international situation has grown worse, I found people unperturbed. Why this change? Because in the meantime the government had decided to extend to this region the famous Maginot Line with the result that the inhabitants now feel themselves amply protected by the barbed-wire barricades along strategic points, by the gun emplacements, the concealed pill boxes and other defense measures that have been installed.

Daladier Notes Calm Along Spanish Frontier.

DALADIER the other day publicly underlined, on his return from an inspection trip along the third front — the Pyrenees — following the outrageous bombardment of French territory by planes of "unknown nationality," his admiration for the calm and sober spirit manifested by the French people.

He is not particularly worried by the violent disputes raging on the subject of foreign affairs. He is convinced that the government is in a strong position to do much for the safeguarding of peace without injury to the dignity of the nation.

It, in general, the government's attitude is meeting with the approval of the country, it is nonetheless necessary to note the criticism which this attitude has aroused in certain quarters.

First of all there is the Communist reproach. France, the Communists say, has tied herself to Chamberlain's apron-strings. It happens to be an attack which, as recent events have shown, is ill-founded. It is true that the present regime, even as all the others that have preceded it for many years, is eager to maintain very close and intimate relations with Great Britain. Such collaboration is possible only between governments and not between a government and an opposition. At the present moment, therefore, the French government must deal with Mr. Chamberlain, as in the past British Labor governments have had to deal with the government of a Poincare, a Tardieu, a Laval.

Anglo-French co-operation is all the more important in that Hitler's policy—like Mussolini's—has as one of its purposes the separation of Great Britain from France. It is to the interests of both democratic powers to prevent a split between them.

It is a mistake to suppose that co-operation with Great Britain means, for France, any subordination to Downing Street. Such collaboration can be effective only if it rests on a basis of perfect equality. And since it is inevitable that the two nations do not always see eye to eye on all matters, mutual concessions must be made. Of course, it is always easiest for the people of a nation to notice those concessions which their own country has made while ignoring those made by the other side. It is not to be questioned, for instance, that if France has on several occasions made an effort with regard to the Spanish problem to find a common basis with England, the latter, for its part, has not hesitated, from time to time, to align itself with France with respect to the Central European situation. Thus it would appear that the Communist complaint has little to justify it.

Government Scored For Lack Of "Pacifism."

THE OTHER complaint against French governmental policy originates with those who critiicize the regime for not being sufficiently "pacifist."

Here it is necessary to draw a distinction between those who are pacifists by conviction and those who are pacifists for political reasons. The first group was well represented in the Socialist congress by two speakers, one representing an association of war veterans and war cripples and the other a young Breton professor who, until the present time has not frequently been heard from. The latter made a profound impression. He refused to admit the rightness of any recourse to war and he found moving arguments to justify a position which is that of all men who let their hearts speak and who, alas, place themselves outside the realities of day to day developments.

It is, on the other hand, under the opposite banner of "realism" that men such as P. E. Flandin, one of the leaders of the right, insist that the policy of the government favor the forces of war. Some days ago he published an article in an important daily newspaper in which he reached conclusions very favorable to Czechoslovakia. But soon after, in a speech to members of his party, he took the French government to task for not limiting its defense plans to French territory alone, and not abandoning the rest of Europe to Hitler's tender mercies. That very night the German and Italian radio exploited this speech in great fashion. In particular they seized upon the legend, propagated by Flandin, that on the night of May 22, when the Czech crisis reached its greatest height, Premier Daladier was ready to sign a decree of mobilization.

There is not a word of truth in this accusation. It is no secret that the attitude of the French government during that crisis was very firm, as was that of Great Britain. But there was no provocation. Far from leading to war the Franco-British attitude and actions led to peace.

As it happens, Flandin was almost alone, so far as center and right parties are concerned, in taking the stand he did. It is not exaggeration to say that the Daladier policy with respect to the May 22 crisis had the support of the overwhelming majority of the French nation.

Labor Conscription In Germany.

IN HIS CAPACITY as commissioner for the Four-Year Plan, Field Marshal Hermann Goering has just issued an extraordinary decree making every individual in Germany subject to conscription for labor service.

Circumstances surrounding the issuance of this decree as well as it language suggest that it is an emergency measure and therefore may be dropped when the emergency is over. For instance, it is stipulated that those drafted for labor service will continue to be paid at least as well as they are in their present jobs, and that, when their term of service is over they will go back to their old posts with rank, pensions and social welfare rights unimpaired.

Yet, in view of the fact that this labor conscription plan constitutes so logical an application of the Third Reich's totalitarian philosophy, the plan may become a permanent feature of the Nazi scheme and may be extended rather than restricted as time goes on.

• • • •

THE IMMEDIATE background of Goering's action appears to be the existence of a marked shortage of labor in certain essential categories with the result that certain unspecified "nationally urgent tasks" are being retarded or held up altogether. To carry out these tasks the Nazi leaders find it necessary, therefore, to shift men who are already employed in one field to jobs which the government deems more immediately desirable.

Just how many individuals will be conscripted in this manner it is, of course, impossible to say. The number may be actually very limited, not because of any qualms the Hitler government may have about shifting men from one industry to another, regardless of their individual views, but because of the very considerable control which is already exercised in Germany over the nation's economic life. The stranglehold which the government has on the exchange situation, to cite but one instance, is such that no industry can get any foreign raw materials without the consent of the regime.

The presumption therefore must be that, with few exceptions, no industry depending on any foreign supplies of raw materials can continue to exist in the Third Reich without the government's active or tacit approval. And in view of the importance of rearmament efforts in the present scheme of things this means that to an increasing degree, only those industries that directly or indirectly aid in the building up of the German war machine are shown any favors.

• • • •

HOW LONG this situation will continue it is impossible to say. The Achilles heel of the Third Reich's economic system is its dependence on foreign sources of raw materials which can be paid for only through exports.

A decline in exports, such as took place during the first months of this year, means a reduction in the wherewithals with which to purchase cotton, rubber, petroleum and other essentials which Germany does not produce in sufficient quantities within its own borders or not at all. The alternative is to find substitutes for such supplies and its is precisely that end which the Four Year plan has in mind.

The task is one requiring gigantic efforts and the goal may prove beyond Germany's reach. But insofar as it can be achieved the effort is certain to lead to an increasing regimentation of industry and labor, of bodies as well as minds, of outlook and expression. Conscription of labor, therefore, while possibly intended to be a temporary and emergency measure, may through the pressure of necessity become a permanent feature of the scene.

• • • •

IT IS INTERESTING that precisely the same development which has been taking place in Germany is now about to be begun in Japan.

The Japanese authorities some time ago made up their minds that the war in China might go on for many months longer. With that in view the Japanese parliament was recently forced to approve the passage of a far-reaching mobilization bill permitting the government to regiment industry and labor. And now, with the earlier suspicions regarding the probable duration of the undeclared war fully confirmed, this bill is to be put into effect.

Germany is not at war. But it is apparent that the system which obtains in the Third Reich is in actuality a war system. All that nation's energies are being concentrated on building up the military potential. A weapon of incalculable power is being forged capable of being put to uses which the world cannot help viewing with mounting dread.

But what is happening in Germany with respect to the regimentation of industry and the conscription of labor is certain in greater or lesser degree to happen to all other nations caught up in the war system. To all those who love freedom and who believe that only through the development of the individual can civilization be advanced, the prospect is a most unpleasant one. But the only effective way of preventing that prospect from becoming a reality is to do away with the war system. Yet, as the events of the past years have so abundantly shown, that goal remains as remote as ever.

Hard Boiled Victorians

Gently-nurtured females fondly cherished dreams as pure as musing asphodels in amaranthine gardens so that young suitors of the highest station bowed worshipfully as they breathed vows of unutterable adoration into shell-like ears. Ah, then, the maidens trembled even as the quivering aspen and sounded thrice from blushful modesty. True, it was, alas, that London bucks and blades hied them to the blossoming countryside and there betrayed the trusting peasant girls, but retribution trod close upon the heels of these hounds decorated with sideburns and violet waistcoats. Did an aging satyr dare to approach his foul lips to the rose-flecked cheeks of a confiding gentlewoman, surely a defender would smite the vile miscreant down into the mire whence he sprang, meantime virtuously exclaiming, "You have kissed a pure woman; you shall die!"

This is the Victorian Age according to legend and American belief—an otiose age of swooning sentiment and songs at twilight. Is it not further attested by the present production in New York of an operetta called "The Two Bouquets" wherein two proper young ladies of Victoria's time are too modest to admit their affection for two young swains of a comparable modesty?

In actual fact the Victorian Age was largely invented by Dickens and Tennyson, wherein art creates a world of idyllic fancy. Indeed, how many readers ask themselves these simple questions: From 1832-1901 did John Bull dominate the sellers' market and complete his empire by wearing lavender and old lace? If the half-witted heroines and gushy heroes of Victorian fiction were ever "true to life," then is Great Britain losing her grip today because her sons no longer bawl over the death of Little Nell and her daughters no longer murmur, "Be good, sweet child, and let who will be clever?"

It would do Americans no harm to forget half-remembered poetry and novels and examine the process of the real Victorian Age, when British population doubled and British wealth increased more than population. No race of star-enchanted sentimentalists multiplied their overseas trade by sixfold, sold their power-driven machinery at huge profits to the globe and clutched the source of raw materials in the Far East. No idle or befuddled heroes ruled the British mines and factories, developed Canada and Australia and won New Zealand and South Africa. No soft-hearted, unscientific Dickensians put trade unions and the Labor Party into municipal and national sovereignty, or kept the British Isles free from the sudden revolutions and violent catastrophes which convulsed France, Italy and Germany.

If tough modernism or rose-colored pacifism is today undermining the insular young generation and gaining the contempt of Fascist nations, then Great Britain had better return to that sugar-and-water way of feeling and acting by which Little Dorrit and Tiny Tim held dominion over palm and pine.

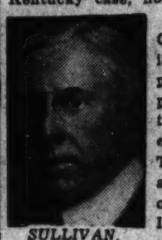
Rolling Mill Case Coming Before NLRB In Kentucky Monday Called Obverse Of Hague Case In New Jersey.

ON MONDAY, in Kentucky will be heard a case which presumably will command Nation-wide attention. It involves the same issue as the suit of the C. I. O. against Mayor Hague of Jersey City. In this Kentucky case, however, the position of the C. I. O. is reversed.



SULLIVAN.

Briefly, in Ashland, Ky., is a local union of the C. I. O. In Ashland also is a plant of the American Rolling Mill Co. The C. I. O. made a complaint against the rolling mill company. The complaint was laid before the National Labor Relations Board, the official Government body, having charge of enforcement of the Wagner labor act. The NLRB received the complaint of the C. I. O. and in turn, on its own account, issued a formal official complaint against the rolling mill company. In the complaint, among other charges, the NLRB makes the following charge—I quote and condense:

The American Rolling Mill Co., by its officers, agents and servants . . . in pursuit of its policy of obstructing union organization and collective bargaining . . . did attempt to influence the municipal administration of the city of Ashland, Ky., by sponsoring for public office in said municipal administration its executive employes . . . and did campaign against candidates for election in said municipal administration with union convictions.

Company And Union Tickets In Ashland.

I HAVE before me only the official complaint issued by the NLRB. From it I infer the facts to be thus: In Ashland there was an election for municipal officers. Apparently, on one ticket, were union sympathizers. Apparently, on the other ticket, were executive employes of the rolling mill company.

In this situation the NLRB makes formal charge against the rolling mill company and its officers and agents. The NLRB charges that in the municipal election, officers of the rolling mill company campaigned for one ticket and against another ticket.

This charge has been brought by the NLRB as prosecutor. The NLRB, in another role, as judge, will hear the case on Monday. If the NLRB as judge sustains the charge made by the NLRB as prosecutor, it seems to mean that officials and agents of a corporation must not, under certain conditions, take any part in a public election for public officials. If a ticket contains candidates who are members of the C. I. O., then the officers, agents and servants of the corporation must not take any part in the campaign against that ticket. If they do take part they are guilty of an "unfair labor practice" and will be severely penalized.

Company Officials Seen Disenfranchised.

THIS IS an extraordinary contention. It would mean that officers and agents of a corporation would under certain conditions be deprived of the right to participate in politics. To participate in politics, to speak and work against one candidate and for another candidate, is supposed to be one of the most fundamental rights a citizen has.

In this Kentucky case, it will be observed, the C. I. O. backed up by an official body, the NLRB, is trying to deprive citizens of a civil right.

Turn back now to the Hague case in Jersey City. There, Mayor Hague resisted entrance of the C. I. O. organizers, refused permits for street meetings, and otherwise hampered C. I. O. organizers and sympathizers. For this, the C. I. O. went into a Federal court for an injunction, on the ground that Mayor Hague was denying the C. I. O. a fundamental civil liberty.

It will be observed that the Hague case and the Kentucky case go together. The Kentucky case is, so to speak, the obverse of the Hague case.

In the Hague case, the C. I. O. has been helped by persons and organizations who defend civil liberties. Notably the C. I. O. has been helped by the organization known as the American Civil Liberties Union—counsel for the Civil Liberties Union acted as counsel for the C. I. O. against Mayor Hague. It will be interesting to observe whether the Civil Liberties Union and similar organizations and individuals who have spoken up for civil liberties in Jersey City, will also speak up for civil liberties in Kentucky. One wonders if Mr. Norman Thomas will go to Kentucky to make a speech in behalf of civil liberties.

Touch Of Comedy Found In Argument.

THE QUESTION of civil liberties is far-reaching and serious. The future of America is involved in it. Civil liberties are under attack in many ways. Yet there is, in the Kentucky case, a touch of comedy. The attempt to deprive private citizens of the right to take part in a political campaign takes place in a State where most of the present politics consists of a struggle between two groups of persons on public pay rolls—persons on the Federal pay roll supporting Senator Barkley for renomination, persons on the State pay roll supporting Senator Barkley's opponent, Gov. Chandler.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

R. S. V. P.

The United Federal Workers of America has addressed the appended communication — which is self-explanatory—to F. A. Hutchinson, president, Lodge 9, American Federation of Government Employees:

"It was with a good deal of interest that members of Commerce Local 23 (U. F. W. A.), read your letter published in the June 20 issue of The Federal Diary. At its regular meeting this afternoon Local 23 voted to submit the following detailed explanation of its activity both to you and to Scott Hart of the Washington Post, with the sincere hope of removing petty misunderstandings and avoiding needless quarreling and bickering to the end that both our organizations can devote their full time and energy in working for the welfare of Commerce Department employes.

"Your first criticism centered around the fact that Local 23 neglected to state in its announcement of a meeting that only temporary employes in the Census Bureau had received dismissal notices. The inference was that an atempt was made to give the impression that permanent employes had also received notices. In its announcement, Local 23 simply stated that many employes were affected. No qualifying adjectives were used because as long as temporary appointees are on a census payroll Local 23, at least, considers them bona fide Census employes.

"As such, its membership rolls are open to them, our adjustment committee will work in their behalf, and our D. C. Unemployment Committee will assist them in securing new jobs. In other words Local 23 makes no distinction between permanent and temporary employes. If having so broad an interest is a crime, Local 23 pleads guilty. . . .

"The second major criticism was that Local 23 attempted to convey the false impression that by obtaining preference in future hiring for the dismissed employes it would have succeeded in establishing a new practice in the Census Bureau. Such a practice has been established for many years and is well known to census employees, some of whom were rehired because of their experience in the 1930 Census. What Local 23 sought was to have the dismissals changed to furloughs thus insuring automatic rehiring and at the same time relieving appointing officers of whatever pressure may exist for making political appointments. Such a practice would benefit both the employes concerned and improve the work of the Census Bureau.

"The Adjustment Committee of Local 23 is pleased to inform you that in the course of its two conferences with Oliver C. Short, director of Census personnel, he stated that of the 80 persons who had received notices probably 27 would be immediately re-employed for the census of manufacturers and that if the work required it 11 or 12 others would be taken if they either had civil service status or were within reach on a register. He urged those who had not yet done so to notify him that they had status or believed they were within reach on a register.

"The reason Local 23 has replied in such detail to your letter as printed in the Federal Diary is to attempt to establish more cordial relations between our organizations. Just as it takes two to make a quarrel, it takes two to make a bargain. Local 23 would prefer to use all its energies for the welfare of Commerce employes and believes that your organization holds a similar attitude. It, therefore, suggests for the consideration of your members a policy of concerted action wherever the aims of both organizations are in substantial agreement. As a starting point, Local 23, of the U. F. W. A., formally proposes that a joint effort be made to secure in the Commerce Department a more effective policy of promotion from within than the one now established.

"Toward that end it is willing to contribute the results of the questionnaire it recently conducted and the time, ideas and energy of its personnel. Local 23 would appreciate a reply from your organization either at the above address (532 Seventeenth street northwest), or by personal communication with the undersigned either at room 3329 Commerce Building, after 4 p. m. or in the evening at Dupont 3776."

Signed,
ROBERT SHERMAN,

"THREE BLIND MICE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a play by Stephen Powys, adapted to the screen by Brown Holmes and Lynn Starling, costarring Loretta Young and Joel McCrea, with David Niven, Stuart Erwin, Marjorie Weaver, Pauline Moore, Binnie Barnes, Jane Darwell, Spencer Charters, Franklin Pangborn and Herb Heywood. Directed by William A. Seiter. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Have you a versatile mind? Yeah, everybody has that opinion of their mental agility.

But the "hard way" test of your mental elasticity is to be found at the Capitol Theater this week. If you like both the women's magazine idealistics (?) of "Three Blind Mice" and those devilish realistics of Buster West in the stage show—then you qualify in our (no prizes offered) athletic inteiligence contest. Personally, this reviewer just bogs down, and takes Buster across the board. What else could we do after laughing so hard it hurt?

Doubtless you've seen Buster West in comedy movie shorts. But, believe you me, you shouldn't miss seeing him in his own natural Technicolor. It's difficult to describe Buster's goings-on without giving a boost to what "burlicue" ought to be, except that Buster's "wishes" are too fast to be wasted on Minsky. (His best skimmed completely over the heads of Capitol's audience yesterday, and was it a honey!)

Anyway, hail and halleluia! Buster. You've had too much space already, but you deserve more. Lucille Page's stepping gives your fooling the correct punctuation.

Those 24 Chester Hale Girls both fill and thrill the Capitol stage. Beauty and precision—that describes them. Their fan dance (without benefit of Sally Rand inspiration) is a sweet 'n' lovely spectacle. Ann Greenway, brings back those tunes of which we can never have enough. Card trickster Le Paul lends the finishing touch to an already four-star stage bill.

Legacy for a Husband.

What to say about "Three Blind Mice." One fiddles between those two good phrases, "nice summer entertainment" and "first class program material." They're both truthful, by audience standards.

The story concerns a little Midwest girl who comes into a legacy and decides to invest it by catching a husband, but instead she catches a sweetheart intent on marrying a girl with money. Loretta Young and Joel McCrea play this precious pair—with their tongues in their cheeks, we think.

Of the basic idea of such entertainment—well, if you like it, you like it. Some people might think it unworthy. To your critic it seems less than that—merely cheap.

But, no denying, there's a lot of fun wound up in the plot. Not much of it is concerned with Loretta Young and Joel McCrea, gallantly as they strive with trivial ideas. Rather would we give honors to Binnie Barnes, as a rascally heiress who takes 'em where she finds 'em, and David Nivin, nice easy-going fella, much more lovable than Great Lover McCrea.

Still, it's a pretty little celluloid, supposing you like cooking recipies. It's all quite moral according to Hays office standards. If you're a darned iconoclast, you'll think it's something else again. After all, what is the difference between those gals whose business careers are barred from the mails and those who set out to marry only if the bridegroom is approved by Dun & Bradstreet?

Shorts and Music.

Willie Howard has a short with a Willie Howard ending. It's cute, but how did it get by?

The newsreel continues to break hearts with candid war shots of China in this year of grace, 1938.

Phil Lampkin and his able cohorts offer an overture consisting of Irving Berlin's best. A good idea and excellent melody. It offers everything from "Alexander's Ragtime Band" to "All Alone by the Telephone"—a situation that the audience appreciated, with hearty applause.

RKO-Keith's

"Mr. Koster and the D.D.'s" is our subject!

First there was Deanna Durbin in three excellent pictures, and now Danielle Darrieux, a smash in her first American-made film. And the constant factor in all four successes is Henry Koster, Director. Four hits out of four times up, is much, much better than lucky batting, and so today we give you Mr. K. and his rapidly increasing stature. It's pretty impressive right now.

We are even beginning to fancy that we can recognize "the Koster touch and all it is, is the human touch. His people are real people in somewhat unreal situations, often with a sort of wish-fulfillment ending. His situations are comedy situations with the heart left in and the slapstick left out.

This current hit of Mr. Koster's is a delicious one, a comedy that moves with speed and sprightliness and boasts a delightful performance by Mlle. Danielle, France's most pleasant feminine gift since the Statue of Liberty, and far more devastating. Here, in a complete change of mood and pace from her beautiful tragic portrait of Marie Vetsera in "Mayerling," she makes a sparkling American debut as a comedienne of resource, timing and charm.

Fairbanks Also Scores.

Playing opposite her, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., is much warmer, more likeable, more natural than in "The Joy of Living," possibly helped by the fact that this time he isn't called upon to imitate Donald Duck. He and Mlle. Danielle play easily and very pleasantly together, particularly in their scenes in their cabin hideout.

Helen Broderick and Mischa Auer help the hilarity along no end, and Louis Hayward is the somewhat hapless and helpless victim of a matrimonial plot, which comes a cropper and yet turns out all right.

The picture should definitely be seen from the beginning. Anyone who misses that delirious artist model sequence, which starts the lady off on such a very wrong foot, will be pretty baffled by later developments.

If we had stars to give out, we'd offer this at least four, plus a "highly recommended" citation.

Gee! Another "D. D!" Is there a numerologist in the house?

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Fay Bainter Offers Fine Character Performance; 'Voices' on Stage.

"WHITE BANNERS." Warner Brothers picturization of the novel by Lloyd C. Douglas, featuring Claude Rains, Fay Bainter, Jackie Cooper, Bonita Granville, Henry O'Neill, Kay Johnson, James Stephenson, J. Farrell McDonald, William Pawley, Edward Pawley, John Ridgely, Mary Field and Edward McWade. Directed by Edmund Goulding. Previewed Wednesday, June 22. At the Earle Theater.

That is to say, those who demand the bizarre magnificence of opulent settings and extravagant costumes as an essential element of their screen fare will find little to their liking here. For that other segment of the theater-going public that is able to perceive the value of the simple things of life and the exaltation of spirit that springs from kindliness, understanding and tolerance, there will be found in the developments of this engrossing drama a deep and rich vein of warm human interest and a wealth of fascinating and wholesome entertainment.

BELL.

The scene of "White Banners" is laid in a small Indiana city, where a college professor and his family struggle to make a meager salary cover both household expenses and the costs of Paul Ward's persistent experimenting with strange inventions—none of which ever has panned out. Social contrast is provided by the introduction of the rich banker and his family, whose adolescent son is a problem child, spoiled by the consciousness of financial resources to extricate him from all of the scrapes into which he manages to project himself. Paul Ward has a daughter of about the same age, who recognizes unusual traits in the athletic young Peter Trimble, and upon that fact hinges much of the livelier interest of the plot.

Enters the Stranger.

One day, in a driving snowstorm, there comes to the Ward door a woman peddling inexpensive gadgets to needy housewives. Invited in, she senses that all is not well in the management of the Ward menage. Volunteering to prepare a dinner of leftovers in payment for the warmth of the kitchen stove, this wistful wayfarer demonstrates an immediate appreciation of the harassments that are plaguing the family. Her job as servant is made permanent upon no salary save what she can eke out of the household allowance by shrewd management.

It is upon these "preliminary situations" that "White Banners" rears its structure of poignant and forceful drama. Hannah Parmalee solves the most acute of the family difficulties and encourages Prof. Ward to persevere in his perfection of a new type of refrigerator and encourages him further to swallow his loss when his patent is pirated. It is also suggested that Peter Trimble's wildness might be curbed by making him a partner in a fresh attempt to hit upon a new idea of "cold from heat"—the basic principle of gas refrigeration.

In the financing of the venture it comes to light that Hannah has acquired her philosophy from bitter experience. Peter is her own son and his father the man who is to supply the backing for the new enterprise. Assured of the future welfare of her boy and unwilling to disillusion him as to his parentage, she departs silently in the early morning, out into the snow whence she had come.

As has been suggested in these columns before, there is a touch of the spirit of "The Servant in the House," "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" and "Mister Antonio" in the substantial fabric of this play. It is simple, unadorned and direct in its appeal to the better impulses of human nature, and it is extremely well played by an ably selected cast.

Fay Bainter, in the role of Hannah, contributes a character study that must take rank with the best of the year and is ably seconded by Claude Rains and Kay Johnson, in the roles of Prof. and Mrs. Ward. The juvenile characters are played with approximate perfection by Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville. A competent supporting cast round out a thoroughly competent ensemble that Edmund Goulding has directed with skill, movement and a lively sense of humor.

All-Star Stage Bill.

The stage bill at the Earle this week is as impressive, in its way, as the screen feature. The living entertainment bristles with headliners, led by Harry Stockwell and Adriana Caselotti, the voices, respectively, of Prince Charming and Snow White in Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Mr. Stockwell first displays his splendid barytone voice in a single offering and then joins Miss Caselotti in excerpts from the famous film, in which they are assisted by an effective simulation of the seven dwarfs. Both voices are cultivated and extremely pleasant to hear.

Then there are Rufe Davis, that incorrigible mimic of both stage and screen, who scored the most emphatic hit of the performance yesterday afternoon; Sam Hearn, the Schlepperman of the Jack Benny broadcasts, who divides his time between monologue and the violin, and the 16 Dancing Subdebs in a variety of tap routines.

Metropolitan

"LITTLE MISS THOROUGHBRED." Warner Brothers picturization of a screen play by Albert DeMond and George Bricker, featuring Ann Sheridan, John Litel, Frank McHugh and Janet Chapman, with Robert Homans, Eric Stanley, Jean Benedict, Maureen Rodin-Ryan and Lottie Williams. Directed by John Farrow. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud.

Little Janet Chapman, newest contender for the Temple crown, is being "Little Miss Thoroughbred" all this week at the Metropolitan. And you can label this as "S" picture, the "S" denoting saccharine. Which is to be construed as no backhanded slap at the little girl, who is blond, cunning, small enough to fit into your vest pocket.

John Litel and Ann Sheridan, both extra nice people, become Janet's parents through the whimsies of the plot, taking her out of the orphanage where the story finds her, into the atmosphere of the race track. Papa John is a tout, though one of the better touts. You guessed it, Janet reforms him: reforms everyone, saves her daddy from a jail sentence, makes his and Ann's marriage a beautiful reality, and through it all, smiles her impish little grin.

With a minimum of the sentimentality which rather dripped most of the time, the story would have been better. As it is, Litel, who is a seasoned actor, seems rather at a loss playing with a so-small leading lady. Perhaps he just doesn't care for the patter of little feet.

No Longer a Juvenile Spitfire

who has outgrown her earlier roles of youthful vixen, such as she made so utterly detestable in "These Three," to cite but one. In "White Banners," this week's screen feature at the Earle Theater, the gifted Miss Granville proves herself a spirited young ingenue of the first rank, playing opposite the equally gifted Jackie Cooper.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Cal., June 24.—Watching Myrna Loy and Clark Gable do a scene for "Too Hot to Handle," was so real you might have been looking at them through a window in their own home. When finished, Myrna came over and called a friend with me by name. She hadn't seen him for eight years. That's not talent, it's a gift, and enrages everyone who hasn't got it. Franklin Roosevelt has it, and how! Never forgets a face or name.

HEDDA HOPPER

I remember faces, but always match them with the wrong name. Usually get away with it by saying: "Sue . . . you know . . . er . . . oh, what a lovely dress that is!" You know we all do it, and how it enrages your male escort, who thinks you just don't want to introduce him to the beauty standing beside you—sometimes he's right.

Just as Clark was promising me a ride in his new car, underslung special body, all golden brown,—I'm certain he bought it to match Carole's new summer clothes—Walter Pidgeon hove in sight. Director Jack Conway called him Homer, Clark called him Clay and Leo Carillo hailed him as Fantail. Myrna just giggled. Haven't got the point yet—still struggling.

If Carrillo has time off between pictures, he's really going to run for Governor of California. I'm telling him now I'll march in a parade for hmi any day. He's one of the sweetest people I've ever met. But do they want that kind of a man in politics? Or shouldn't I ask?

Of course he won't get it because he hasn't a political machine behind him. But if they want a man with a record of good deeds and beloved by everyone who's ever come in contact with him, such a one is Leo Carrillo.

Mickey Rooney came on the set and I heard him stalking about his new car.

"So you're going to have one just like Clark's, eh?"

"Naw, 't ain't so. All right for that big bear to sit in a jallopie like that. Wouldn't I look silly? I'll stick to me own price and size, thanks."

Mickey's thrilled at going on location for "Boy's Town." It'll be a vacation for him, only doing one picture at a time. Omaha folk are smartening up the city to give them a royal welcome. Hope they won't call on the elements. They treated me to a cyclone thereonce.

For our producers who think an air show ruins their stars at the boxoffice: Tyrone Power received 1,800 letters after a recent broadcast. And Don Ameche, who does everything but nip ups on his program has been voted No. 1 master of ceremonies for two straight years. When he sails for Europe the 3rd of July, it will be the first time in seven years he's had more than 13 days off at a time.

Power gets two months off when he finishes "Jesse James." What do you think he's going to do with them? Take a rest by doing a play on Broadway. Honest injun. If he's not careful he'll prove, in one short year, at the age of 24, that he's as good an actor as his father ever was.

They's just discovered why most of the extras on the "Suez" picture want to be Arabs and traders. The boys got wind of the fact that the Egyptian servants have to walk over the hot sands in their bare feet.

Can you imagine anyone loving cod liver oil twice a day! The Quints do. Also consume 16 ounces of milk daily. They've been introduced to ice cream cones. Motion picture influence, no doubt.

The best show on "The Great Waltz" set is still Red Golden; assistant director. He'll listen attetively to Director Duvivier and Fernard Gravet spieling excitedly to each other in French. When finished, he'll say, "Now, what came out of all that?" Then Duvivier listens to Red telling the extras to check their chewing gum, wrist watches and go to work. And Vivie hasn't an idea what he's said!

Miliza Korjus has gone broke buying radios. Listens to them all the time, and repeats each word she's heard—by so doing, is polishting her English.

Most interested spectator was Jeanne Renouardt, noted and richest French actress, whose collection of jewels can't be matched in Hollywood. She's Mrs. Gravet—so modest, you'd never know she'd played a scene in her life. They don't know it yet, here.

Gratifying to all theater lovers to hear the applause given Helen Hayes for her Portia in "The Merchant of Venice." It's the first time Hollywood has even forgotten the importance of self to do honor to our First Lady of the Theater.

Trans-Lux

Do you want to see the low down on what it takes to be a doctor and a surgeon? Do you want to take a glimpse inside the curtains as a major operation is performed? Then see "The March of Time" at the Trans-Lux Theater this week. There are several scenes included taken at Walter Reed Hospital.

There is also a pictorial whereby you take a trip to the moon with the world's largest telescope.

The news section is all-embracing. Sports, from a new water-wheel gadget to Louis being interviewed after the now famous fight. Lew Lehr describes in his inimitable way how you can plow by airplane, and for the ladies there is the latest in summer jewelry, including a bracelet watch with a collapsible top.

The spy roundup and the Roosevelt wedding are outstanding in the news, and in swift rotation you find yourself running from New York to London as King George leads the historic trooping of the colors while President Roosevelt arrives at Poughkeepsie on his way to the Capital.

Secretary Ickes and his bride are "shot" as they arrive in New York, and there are some cute shots of England's princesses as they start for their first trip to Paris.

All in all, a fine show, topped off with one of the best Walt Disney color cartoons in a long while. It is titled, "Orphan's Picnic." But wait until you see it!

"THE TOY WIFE." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a screen play by Zoe Akins, starring Luise Rainer, with Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young, Barbara O'Neil, H. B. Warner, Alma Kruger, Walter Kingsford, Leonard Penn, Clarence Muse, Libby Taylor, Theresa Harris, Clinton Rosemond and Alan Peri. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Previewed Tuesday, June 21. At Loew's Palace Theater.

It would have suited the nature of the play, and its central character, quite as well if this film romance had been called "The Coy Wife" instead of "The Toy Wife."

Through much of the action, the talents possessed by Luise Rainer, and proved by the acquisition of two Academy awards in succession, are devoted to an exaggerated exposition of a young bride's coquettish frivolities. It is not until the closing sequences of the Zoe Akins drama have been reached that Miss Rainer, in the name part, is permitted to reveal the emotional depths and the tugging power with which she is able to imbue a role. It is then almost too late.

There is much in the pattern of "The Toy Wife" that suggests both the outline and the content of "Jezebel." Both are plays of the Old South, pitched in about the same period of hoopskirts and wide-verandaed plantation mansions. Both bring rival young men to the duelling ground and one of them to a quick death. Both end on a note of deadly disease.

Sisterly Rivalry.

"The Toy Wife" opens with the return to the plantation home of the Brigards of the two daughters of the family, who have been traveling in Europe. The elder of them is deeply found of a brilliant young lawyer, George Sartois. The younger comes to be, also, in time, and marries him. Marriage to Gilberte Brigard, "Frou-Frou," was the ultima thule of a young lady's existence and virtually ended the need of any sense of responsibility to her home, her husband or her son. So the elder sister stepped in and took charge, after Sartoris had confided to her that only disaster faced him and his "toy wife" as things were.

Out of this impasse grew the elopement of Gilberte with Andre Villaire, the young wastrel and "man of the world." And it was out of that elopement, in turn, that sprang the tragic passages that bring the play to a lachrymose close.

Among the supporting players, the best work by far is done by Barbara O'Neil, in the role of the same and substantial Louise Brigard, and Melwyn Douglas, as the husband. The worth of Robert Young's performance, as Andre, no doubt will be underestimated, as usual, because the part, at best, is not a sympathetic one. As the elder Brigard and Madame Villaire H. B. Warner and Alma Kruger, two of the theater's most reliable artists, play with dignity and authority. The remainder of the cast serve in purely secondary capacities, Clarence Muse, Theresa Harris, Clinton Rosemond and Libby Taylor accounting for the most prominent of the slave parts in which the antebellum story abounds.

On the musical side is Billy Rose's "Cage Manana Revue," brought up practically in its entirety, one suspects, from that Texas Exposition and abounding in talent and feminine pulchritude.

A new issue of the News of the Day," reflecting important world happenings of the past week, is the third complement of a major screen feature that for much of its length seems not to be ideally attuned to the capabilities of its star.

Columbia

The valiant fight that was waged against yellow fever by Maj. Walter Reed in Cuba at the end of the Spanish-American War again may be followed this week on the screen of Loew's Columbia Theater, where Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Yellow Jack" yesterday opened a repeat engagement.

The story of this heroic picture is based on the stage play by Sidney Howard, who, in turn, acknowledges his indebtedness to Paul de Kruif's book of "Microbe Hunters." It combines with the principal thread of narrative, concerning the actual solving of the ages-old puzzle of yellow fever's causes, method of contagion and cure, a romantic story that marks the film play's chief point of deviation from the original version. This, however, in no way impairs the forcefulness of grim recital that is unfolded—although there are occasional interpolations of comedy that do.

The stellar roles, the romance being accepted, are played by Robert Montgomery, as Sergt. O'Hara, and Virginia Bruce, as the nurse with whom he falls in love. Mr. Montgomery has the richer part of the two and plays it delightfully and heroically. That dependable actor, Lewis S. Stone, appears in the guise of Maj. Walter Reed; Charles Coburn, as Dr. Finlay; Jonathan Hale, as Gen. Leonard Wood, and Henry S. Hinds, as Gen. Gorgas.

HERBERT HOOVER: Alf Landon, in a letter to New York three days ago, reported that he had been out in his oil field all day long. . . . "I love doing this," Landon declared. "And who'd be silly enough to change such excitement—for a stupid political job?"

GUTHRIE McCLINTIC: Burgess Meredith, who has been starring in your productions, will portray Henry the Fifth for Orson Welles' Mercury Theater. Gene Tunney explained it in typical Tunney fashion: "Max didn't cerebrate."

ALFRED HITCHCOCK: Your first movie production here will star Charles Laughton in "Jamaica Inn" . . . TOMMY MANVILLE: Justice Ferdinand Pecora last night saw Mrs. Marcelle Carlisle, who was pointed out as your former wife. JIMMY CAGNEY: In preparation for your new movie, "Angels Have Dirty Faces," Warners yesterday took a gang of kids from Thirtieth street and Second avenue to their Brooklyn studios to screen-test them for the tough roles. The kids almost wrecked the joint.

ICC: Railroad officials have heard that you plan to call a special session in October for legislation to ease the plight of the railroads . . . ROBERT TAYLOR: Was that nice—walking out at Leon & Eddie's last night just because the lady was a bit late?

THOMAS E. DEWEY: Is it true that you plan further indictments in the Hines case, because of incidents at special sessions? . . . WILL HAYS: Magazine editors are cutting down on their prices for stories—because they're being swamped with stories by former film writers who were victims in the recent economic purge in Hollywood.

Merle Thorpe, editor of The Nation's Business, last night told 194 graduates of the Washington School for Secretaries not to believe "you are stepping out into a cold, cruel world."

"You are about to enter a warm, pulsating world," Thorpe said. "A world sympathetic to new ideas and new personalities, in which the activities of man were never so varied, never so purposeful, all pointing to a fuller and more complete life."

2 Lutheran Sects Move to Merger

St. Louis, June 24 (AP).—The first step toward intersynodical union of the two Lutheran churches was completed today at the closing session of the centennial convention of the Evangelical Luther Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other States.

The synod delegates, representing more than 5,000 congregations and mission stations in the United States, Canada and South America, approved the proposal "for church fellowship" between their organization and the American Lutheran Church, split by doctrinal differences more than 50 years ago.

The American Lutheran Church is scheduled to act on the plan at its synodical meeting in August.

Ex-Mate Is Jailed For Phoning Wife

Because he persisted in telephoning his wife while she was at work in the RFC, Walter H. Reuling, of 1343 South Carolina avenue southeast, yesterday was jailed for 60 days by Justice Peyton Gordon and on a contempt of court charge for violating an order restraining him from annoying Mrs. Ethel A. Reuling, who obtained a limited divorce a year ago.

Cloudy Skies Followed By Rain Likely Today

Cloudy skies, followed probably by rain tonight, were on the District's weather menu today. The forecaster said there would not be much change in temperature. Yesterday's maximum was 91 shortly after 4 p. m., while a minimum of 65 was recorded early in the morning.

Mr. Roosevelt Dubs Foes 'Copperheads'

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt tagged opponents of his policies with another name last night—"Copperheads."

As he did when he applied the word "Tories" to his critics, Mr. Roosevelt turned to history for the appellation he used in his prepared address tonight. He said "Copperheads" were carrying on a "concerted campaign" to defeat reform.

"It was the Copperheads," he explained, "who, in the days of the war between the States, tried their best to make Lincoln and his Congress give up the fight, let the Nation remain split in two and return to peace—peace at any price."

Labor Standards act. That act—applying to products in interstate commerce— ends child labor, sets a floor below wages and a ceiling over hours of labor.

Except perhaps for the Social Security act, it is the most far-sighted program for the benefit of workers ever adopted. Without question it starts us toward a better standard of living and increases purchasing power to buy the products of farm and factory.

Do not let any calamity-howling executive with an income of $1,000 a day, who has been turning his employes over to the Government relief rolls in order to preserve his company's undistributed reserves, tell you—using his stockholders' money to pay the postage for his personal opinions—that a wage of $11 a week is going to have a disastrous effect on all American industry. Fortunately for business as a whole, and therefore for the Nation, that type of executive is a rarity with whom most business executives heartily disagree.

3. The Congress has provided a fact-finding Commission to find a path through the jungle of contradictory theories about wise business practices—to find the necessary facts for any intelligent legislation on monopoly, on price-fixing and on the relationship between big business and little business. Different from a great part of the world, we in America persist in our belief in individual enterprise and in the profit motive; but we realize we most continually seek improved practices to insure the continuance of reasonable profits, together with scientific progress, individual initiative, opportunities for the little fellow, fair prices, decent wages and continuing employment.

Civil Aeronautics Authority Set Up.

4. The Congress has co-ordinated the supervision of commercial aviation and air mail by establishing a new Civil Aeronautics Authority; and it has placed all postmasters under the civil service for the first time in our history.

5. The Congress set up the United States Housing Administration to help finance large-scale slum clearance and provide low rent housing for the low income groups in our cities. And by improving the Federal Housing act, the Congress made it easier for private capital to build modest homes and low rental dwellings.

6. The Congress has properly reduced taxes on small corporate enterprises, and has made it easier for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make credit available to all business. I think the bankers of the country can fairly be expected to participate in loans where the Government, through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, offers to take a fair portion of the risk.

7. The Congress has provided additional funds for the Works Progress Administration, the Public Works Administration, the Rural Electrification Administration, the Civilian Conservation Corps and other agencies, in order to take care of what we hope is a temporary additional number of unemployed and to encourage production of every kind by private enterprise.

Program to Defend Economic System.

All these things together I call our program for the national defense of our economic system. It is a program of balanced action—of moving on all fronts at once in intelligent recognition that all our economic problems, of every group, of every section, are essentially one.

8. Because of increasing armaments in other nations and an international situation which is definitely disturbing to all of us, the Congress has authorized important additions to the National armed defense of our shores and our people.

On another important subject the net result of a struggle in the Congress has been an important victory for the people of the United States — a lost battle which won a war.

You will remember that on February 5, 1937, I sent a message to the Congress dealing with the real need of Federal Court reforms of several kinds. In one way or another, during the sessions of this Congress, the ends—the real objectives—sought in the message, have been substantially attained.

The attitude of the Supreme Court towards constitutional questions is entirely changed. Its recent decisions are eloquent testimony of a willingness to collaborate with the two other branches of Government to make democracy work. The Government has been granted the right to protect its interests in litigation between private parties involving the constitutionality of Federal statutes, and to appeal directly to the Supreme Court in all cases involving the constitutionality of Federal statutes; and no single judge is any longer empowered to suspend a Federal statute on his sole judgment as to its constitutionality. Justices of the Supreme Court may now retire at the age of 70 after ten years service; a substantial number of additional judgeships have been created in order to expedite the trial of cases; and greater flexibility has been added to the Federal judicial system by allowing judges to be assigned to congested districts.

Sees Response To Liberal Trend.

Another indirect accomplishment of this Congress has been its response to the devotion of the American people to a course of sane consistent liberalism. The Congress has understood that under modern conditions government has a continuing responsibility to meet continuing problems, and that Government cannot take a holiday of a year, a month, or even a day just because a few people are tired or frightened by the inescapable pace of this modern world in which we live.

Some of my opponents and some of my associates have considered that I have a mistakenly sentimental judgment as to the tenacity of purpose and the general level of intelligence of the American people.

I am still convinced that the American people, since 1932, continue to insist on two requisites of private enterprise, and the relationship of Government to it. The first is complete honesty at the top in looking after the use of other people's money, and in apportioning and paying individual and corporate taxes according to ability to pay. The second is sincere respect for the need of all at the bottom to get work—and through work to get a really fair share of the good things of life, and a chance to save and rise.

Told He Should Coast After 1936 Election.

After the election of 1936 I was told, and the Congress was told, by an increasing number of politically—and worldly—wise people that I should coast along, enjoy an easy Presidency for four years, and not take the Democratic platform too seriously. They told me that people were getting weary of reform through political effort and would no longer oppose that small minority which, in spite of its own disastrous leadership in 1929, is always eager to resume its control over the Government of the United States.

Never in our lifetime has such a concerted campaign of defeatism been thrown at the heads of the President and Senators and Congressmen as in the case of this Seventy-Fifth Congress. Never before have we had so many Copperheads—and you will remember that it was the Copperheads who, in the days of the War between the States, tried their best to make Lincoln and his Congress give up the fight, let the Nation remain split in two and return to peace—peace at any price.

This Congress has ended on the side of the people. My faith in the American people—and their faith in themselves—have been justified. I congratulate the Congress and the leadership thereof and I congratulate the American people on their own staying power.

One word about your economic situation. It makes no difference to me whether you call it a recession or a depression. In 1932 the total national income of all the people in the country had reached the low point of $38,000,000,000 in that year. With each succeeding year it rose. Last year, 1937, it had risen to $70,000,000,000—despite definitely worse business and agricultural prices in the last four months of last year. This year, 1938, while it is too early to do more than give an estimate, we hope that the national income will not fall below $60,000,000,000. We remember also that banking and business and farming are not falling apart like the one-hoss shay, as they did in the terrible winter of 1932-1933.

Last year mistakes were made by the leaders of private enterprise, by the leaders of labor and by the leaders of Government—all three.

Says Inventories Increased Too Fast.

Last year the leaders of private enterprise pleaded for a sudden curtailment of public spending, and said they would take up the slack. But they made the mistake of increasing their inventories too fast and setting many of their prices too high for their goods to sell.

Some labor leaders goaded by decades of oppression of labor made the mistake of going too far. They were not wise in using methods which frightened many well-wishing people. They asked employers not only to bargain with them but to put up with jurisdictional disputes at the same time.

Government too made mistakes—mistakes of optimism in assuming that industry and labor would themselves make no mistakes—and Government made a mistake of timing in not passing a farm bill or a wage and hour bill last year.

As a result of the lessons of all these mistakes we hope that in the future private enterprise—capital and labor alike—will operate more intelligently together, and in greater co-operation with their own Government than they have in the past. Such co-operation on the part of both of them will be very welcome to me. Certainly at this stage there should be a united stand on the part of both of them to resist wage cuts which would further reduce purchasing power.

Today a great steel company announced a reduction in prices with a view to stimulating business recovery, and I was gratified to know that this reduction involved no wage cut. Every encouragement should be given to industry which accepts a large volume-high wage policy.

If this is done, it ought to result in conditions which will replace a great part of the Government spending which the failure of co-operation made necessary this year.

From March 4, 1933 down, not a single week has passed without a cry from the opposition "to do something, to say something, to restore confidence." There is a very articulate group of people in this country, who have consistently refused to co-operate with the mass of the people, whether things were going well or going badly, on the ground that they required more concessions to their point of view before they would admit having what they called "confidence."

These people demanded "restoration of confidence" when the banks were closed—and again when the banks were re-opened.

They demanded "restoration of confidence" when hungry people were thronging the streets—and again when the hungry people were fed and put to work.

They demanded "restoration of confidence" when droughts hit the country—and again now when our fields are laden with bounteous yields and excessive crops.

They demanded "restoration of confidence" last year when the automobile industry was running three shifts and turning out more cars than the country could buy—and again this year when the industry is trying to get rid of an automobile surplus and has shut down its factories as a result.

It is my belief that many of these people who have been crying aloud for "confidence" are begining today to realize that that hand has been overplayed, and that they are now willing to talk co-operation instead. It is my belief that the mass of the American people do have confidence in themselves—have confidence in their ability, with the aid of Government, to solve their own problems.

It is because you are not satisfied, and I am not satisfied, with the progress we have made in finally solving our business and agricultural and social problems that I believe the great majority of you want your Government to keep on trying to solve them. In simple frankness and in simple honesty, I need all the help I can get—and I see signs of getting more help in the future from many who have fought against progress with tooth and nail.

And now following out this line of thought, I want to say a few words about the coming political primaries.

Takes Up Subject Of Primary Ballot.

Fifty years ago party nominations were generally made in conventions—a system typified in the public imagination by a little group in a smoke-filled room who made out the party slates.

The direct primary was invented to make the nominating process a more democratic one—to give the party voters themselves a chance to pick their party candidates.

What I am going to say to you tonight does not relate to the primaries of any particular political party, but to matters of principle in all parties—Democratic, Republican, Farmer-Labor, Progressive, Socialist or any other. Let that be clearly understood.

It is my hope that everybody affiliated with any party will vote in the primaries, and that every such voter will consider the fundamental principles for which his party is on record. That makes for a healthy choice between the candidates of the opposing parties on Election Day in November.

An election cannot give a country a firm sense of direction if it has two or more national parties which merely have different names but are as alike in their principles and aims as peas in the same pod.

In the coming primaries in all parties, there will be many clashes between two schools of thought, generally classified as liberal and conservative. Roughly speaking, the liberal school of thought recognizes that the new conditions throughout the world call for new remedies.

Those of us in America who hold to this school of thought, insist that these new remedies can be adopted and successfully maintained in this country under our present form of government if we use government as an instrument of co-operation to provide these remedies. We believe that we can solve our problems through continuing effort, through democratic processes instead of Fascism or Communism. We are opposed to the kind of moratorium on reform which, in effect, is reaction itself.

Be it clearly understood, however that when I use the word "liberal," I mean the believer in progressive principles of democratic, representative government and not the wild man who, in effect, leans in the direction of Communism, for that is just as dangerous as Fascism.

The opposing or conservative school of thought, as a general proposition, does not recognize the need for Government itself to step in and take action to meet these new problems. It believes that individual initiative and private philanthropy will solve them—that we ought to repeal many of the things we have done and go back, for instance, to the old gold standard, or stop all this business of old-age pensions and unemployment insurance, or repeal the Securities and Exchange Act, or let monopolies thrive unchecked—return, in effect, to the kind of government we had in the twenties.

Assuming the mental capacity of all the candidates, the important question which it seems to me the primary voter must ask is this: "To which of these general schools of thought does the candidate belong?"

As President of the United States, I am not asking the voters of the country to vote for Democrats next November as opposed to Republicans or members of any other party. Nor am I, as President, taking part in Democratic primaries.

As the head of the Democratic party, however, charged with the responsibility of carrying out the definitely liberal declaration of principles set forth in the 1936 Democratic platform, I feel that I have every right to speak in those few instances where there may be a clear issue between candidates for a Democratic nomination involving these principles, or involving a clear misuse of my own name.

Do not misunderstand me. I certainly would not indicate a preference in a State primary merely because a candidate, otherwise liberal in outlook, had conscientiously differed with me on any single issue. I should be far more concerned about the general attitude of a candidate toward present day problems and his own inward desire to get practical needs attended to in a practical way. We all know that progress may be blocked by outspoken reactionaries and also by those who say "yes" to a progressive objective, but who always find some reason to oppose any specific proposal to gain that objective. I call that type of candidate a "yes, but" fellow.

Expresses Concern About Free Speech.

And I am concerned about the attitude of a candidate or his sponsors with respect to the rights of American citizens to assemble peaceably and to express publicly their views and opinions on important social and economic issues. There can be no constitutional democracy in any community which denies to the individual his freedom to speak and worship as he wishes. The American people will not be deceived by anyone who attempts to suppress individual liberty under the pretense of patriotism.

This being a free country with freedom of expression—especially with freedom of the press—there will be a lot of mean blows struck between now and election day. By "blows" I mean misrepresentation, personal attack and appeals to prejudice. It would be a lot better, of course, if campaigns everywhere could be waged with arguments instead of blows.

I hope the liberal candidates will confine themselves to argument and not resort to blows. In nine cases out of ten the speaker or writer who, seeking to influence public opinion, descends from calm argument to unfair blows hurts himself more than his opponent.

The Chinese have a story on this—a story based on three or four thousand years of civilization. Two Chinese coolies were arguing heatedly in the midst of a crowd. A stranger expressed surprise that no blows were being struck. His Chinese friend replied: "The man who strikes first admits that his ideas have given out."

I know that neither in the summer primaries nor in the November elections will the American voters fail to spot the candidate whose ideas have given out.

When President Roosevelt last night hit at "any calamity-howling executive with an income of $1,000 a day" who holds "that a wage of $11 a week (the minimum under the wage-hour act) is going to have a disastrous effect on all industry," there was speculation as to whether he was referring to any particular individual.

It was recalled that Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of General Motors Corporation, whose compensation from that company for the 1936 tax year has been reported at $651,311, recently sent a report to his stockholders warning of the effects of Federal wage-hour legislation.

While income reports that would provide the names of all $1,000-a-day executives are not available, here are some whose salaries and bonuses indicate they probably are in that group.

For the 1936 tax year, as reported by the Treasury to Congress, the following officers of General Motors:

Thomas J. Watson, president, received $342,000 from International Business Machines Corporation, and Vincent Fisher received $320,296 in sales commissions from the G. L. Ohrstrom Co.

These sums represent only compensation for personal services and do not include dividends, interest or other income.

Eugene G. Grace, president, Bethlehem Steel Corporation, $394,586; F. B. Davis, jr., chairman of United States Rubber Co., $323,240 (he received $227,260 in 1936), and Nicholas M. Schenk, president and director of Loew's, Inc., $312,785.

Chat

conscientiously differed with me on any single issue.

"I should be far more concerned about the general attitude of a candidate toward present-day problems and his own inward desire to get practical needs attended to in a practical way."

This plain assertion that the President feels free to intervene in primaries involving conservative-versus-New Deal issues came on the heels of new "purge" charges in nearby Virginia.

The Administration was reported lending support to William E. Dodd, jr., son of the former Ambassador, in his primary fight to unseat Representative Howard W. Smith, strongly entrenched House Rules Committee member and opponent of the wage-hour bill.

"Purge" Widely Feared.

Senate court plan opponents up for re-election in half a dozen States previously had been widely reported as marked for the "purge." Prominent among those against whom the President might conceivably take a hand under last night's statement of his "right" were Senators Tydings, of Maryland; Van Nuys, of Indiana; Smith, of South Carolina, and George, of Georgia.

First showdown on the President's intentions to speak out in primaries as "head of the party" will probably come on his Western trip early next month. He told reporters yesterday he will say a few kind words in Oklahoma, where New Deal Senator Elmer Thomas is hard pressed in his race for re-election by Gov. Marland and Representative Gomer Smith. Marland had urged the President not to enter the State until after the primaries.

The President said he was not asking voters to support Democrats as opposed to Republicans or members of other parties, but to decide whether a candidate belonged to liberal or conservative "schools of thought."

By conservatives, he said he meant those who advocate, in effect, a return "to the kind of government we had in the twenties." By liberals, he said he meant believers "in progressive principles of democratic, representative government, and not the wild man, who, in effect, leans in the direction of communism, for that is just as dangerous as fascism."

Urges All to Vote.

He called on all persons affiliated with any party to vote in the primaries to provide "a healthy choice between the candidates" and to ask, "to which of these general schools of thought does the candidate belong?"

Liberal candidates were admonished to "confine themselves to arguments and not to blows," the President citing the Chinese saying that "the man who strikes first admits that his ideas have given out."

"This being a free country," he said, "with freedom of expression—especially with freedom of the press—there will be a lot of mean blows struck between now and election day."

His attack on the "calamity-howling executive" making $1,000 a day, but "turning his employes over to the Government relief rolls in order to preserve his company's undistributed reserves," he qualified by saying the type "is a rarity with whom most business executives heartily disagree."

Praises Steel Firm.

Later he praised yesterday's reduction in prices by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, without an accompanying cut in wages. The President said "every encouragement should be given to industry which accepts a large volume-high wage policy."

His reference to "Copperheads," and a "concerted campaign of defeatism" against his reform policies, undoubtedly was aimed at his coalition opposition in Congress.

More personal were his criticism of labor leaders for last year's "mistakes" and his discussion of the rights of citizens "to assemble peaceably and to express publicly their views and opinions."

Hague Not Named.

Without naming Mayor Hague, of Jersey City, now combating a court effort by C. I. O. leaders to send organizers into Jersey City, the President said "there can be no constitutional democracy in any community which denies to the individual his fredom to speak and worship as he chooses."

And without naming John L. Lewis, of the C. I. O., he said "some labor leaders, goaded by decades of oppression of labor, made the mistake of going too far. They were not wise in using methods which frightened many well-wishing people."

The President opened his speech with a review of the session's legislative record, and declared that "barring unforseen events" there will be no special session.

Hails Wage-Hour Act.

Except perhaps for the social security law, he said the wage-hour act was "the most far-sighted program for the benefit of workers ever adopted." He said the farm act would give the farmer "a fairer share of the national income" and called WPA, PWA, rural power and CCC appropriations an effort "to take care of what we hope is a temporary additional number of unemployed and to encourage production of every kind of private enterprise."

The pending legislative-executive investigation of monopolies he indorsed as "a fact-finding commission to find a path through the jungle of contradictory theories about wise business practices—to find the necessary facts for any intelligent legislation on monopoly, on price-fixing and on the relationship between big business and little business."

Of the tax bill which he allowed to become law without signing, he referred only to reduction of "taxes on small corporate enterprises." Also listed in his record of the session's "important" achievements were creation of the Civil Aeronautics authority, creation of the Housing administration, nprovements in the Federal Housing act and authority for the RFC to make new credit available to business.

To Defend Economic System.

He called all of these measures "our program for the national defense of our economic system . . . of moving on all fronts at once in intelligent recognition that all our economic problems, of every group, of every section, are essentially on . . ."

Lastly he listed additional expenditures for the national defense "because of increasing armaments in other nations and an international situation which is definitely disturbing to all of us."

In insisting his court plan objectives have been largely attained, he said the Supreme Court's attitude on constitutional questions has entirely changed and called recent decisions "eloquent testimony of a willingness to collaborate with the two other branches of Government to make Democracy work."

New Orleans, June 24 (AP).—Police raided general headquarters of the Committee for Industrial Organization today and arrested 84 persons, including 6 women office workers, on vagrancy charges in connection with a C. I. O.-called strike against 10 drayage firms.

Circulation Man Succumbs in Baltimore After Stroke.

Harry Turner, who had been the oldest Washington Post employe in point of service, died early yesterday in Baltimore after an illness dating from October 23, when he celebrated his sixty-fourth birthday and start of his fiftieth year on the newspaper.

On his birthday he was given a party by colleagues in the circulation department of the paper, where he was in charge of addressograph work. He became so excited that day that he had to go home in a taxicab. He became ill then and his death yesterday came after his fourth paralytic stroke.

On that day, when he expressed the hope of working 75 years for the paper, he reminisced on the early days after he had gone to work in the mail room.

On October 23, 1887, The Post was published at Tenth and D streets northwest and had only a circulation of 3,000 10 to 12 page papers. His first duties then were many. He wrapped the papers and started them on their way to what was then the suburbs by horse car and hansom cabs.

As he looked over addressograph plates which would mail Posts all over the world, he chuckled last fall to think of the times when Fifteenth and H streets northeast was about the end of the city and carrier routes, and papers beyond were delivered by mail.

He died at the home of a brother-in-law, Joseph Elbert. He lived in Washington at 1125 I street northeast with his wife, the former Mary Josephine Elbert, whom he married 41 years ago, and his daughter, Mrs. Allan Redrow.

He also leaves three daughters, Mrs. Amelia Skinner, Mrs. Agnes Miller and Mrs. Emma Keith, all of Washington.

Mr. Turner was a member of the Holy Name Society.

Funeral services will be held at 8:30 a. m. Monday at the residence. Requiem mass will be said by the Rev. Paul J. Dougherty at Holy Name Church at 9 a. m. Interment will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

The Lesson-Sermon also contains the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "There is but one way to heaven, harmony, and Christ in divine Science shows us this way. It is to know no other reality—to have no other consciousness of life—than good, God and His reflection, and to rise superior to the so-called pain and pleasure of the senses." (Page 242.)

Mass Set in St. Anthony's Church Before Cornerstone-Laying Rites

Reversing completely the usual order of such things, parishioners of St. Anthony's Catholic Church, in Brookland, will attend cornerstone-laying rites at their church tomorrow after attending services in it. Mass will be celebrated at 6:30 a. m. in the recently completed $150,000 building, while the cornerstone-laying is scheduled at 3 p. m.

With the sanction of Archbishop Curley, of the Baltimore diocese, the Rev. Patrick E. Conroy, pastor of St. Anthony's, will officiate at the cornerstone-laying rites. Principal speaker will be Father Joseph E. Buckley, rector of St. Francis Xavier parish. Over 50 Catholic dignitaries are to participate in the ceremonies.

Cards bearing the names of contributors to the building fund will be among articles placed in the cornerstone of the new edifice, which is of Romanesque style and concrete construction. A feature of the interior will be stained-glass windows depicting the Catholic history of Washington and Maryland, from the first settlement at Leonardtown to the present.

First pastor and founder of the congregation was Dr. H. Hyvernat, 83-year-old retired professor of Oriental languages at Catholic University, who now lives opposite the church, at the corner of Twelfth and Monroe streets northeast. Nine pastors have served at St. Anthony's during its 46-year history.

Michael Ready, a member of the congregation and a student at St. Anthony's High School, was recently awarded a scholarship to Catholic University, while two girl students were given scholarships to Dumbarton College.

The parish has three assistant pastors. They are the Rev. James P. Grace, the Rev. James A. Dwyer and the Rev. Thomas F. Sweeney.

Do You Think It Would Be a Good Thing for All the Protestant Churches to Unite?

This is a moot question discussed at every important church conference in the last few years. What do laymen actually think about this movement? Investigators for the Gallup Poll have just completed a survey asking thousands of Americans their opinions on the subject. The interesting results will be published in The Post tomorrow.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

THERE IS NOTHING lackadaisical about the interest which readers of this column show in its problems and suggested solutions. Nearly every letter, almost every answer, provokes an immediate backfire of lively comment. Because these letters carry a real wallop, give much food for thought, and show which way the wind of public opinion blows, I think it is only fair to yield this space in their favor now and again. Today's letters touch on giddy wives, the meaning of love, education for children, and (of course!) the moot question of courtship in Washington. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I agree with the answer you gave "Husband" in your column of June 21. When a person sings or dances a solo he is free to use as much freedom of expression as he wishes. If he makes a mistake, it affects nobody but himself. But in a duet he must do team-work. He is not free to run the gamut of individual experiment.

When a man is single he can do anything he pleases, go where he wants and stay out as long as he likes. The same goes for a woman. When we marry, however, we put the privileges of single life behind us. We can't eat our cake and have it, too. "Husband," however, seems to think you can, and so does "Perplexed," the flighty wife whom he champions. They are birds of a feather.

• • • •

I feel sorry for the wife of this type of man, and sorry for the husband of "Perplexed." Neither is married to the right type of person. "Perplexed" should have married "Husband." Then each would have been free to do as he pleased, for I assume each would have given the other one hundred per cent accomodation. But I'd like to see the average straight-thinking, well-behaved husband who would let his wife run around with every Tom, Dick and Harry and take it lying down. My hand to you, Mary Haworth, for giving "Husband" the right answer. Sincerely yours, R. L.

Brickbat for 'Husband!'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: "Husband" really stuck his neck out where you could get a good crack at it and you certainly told him something. More power to you!

ANOTHER HUSBAND.

Meaning of Love.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You were certainly put on the spot (see column of June 16) by "Reader," who pities you because you have "never known real love." It looks to me as if she confuses love with physical satisfaction. Her description of shimmying and shivering when some man appears, opens a door, looks at her, etc., amuses me. To me, this thing called love means well-balanced companionship, trustworthy co-operation in overcoming obstacles and shared enjoyment of life, rather than an attack of emotional jitters in the presence of the so-called beloved.

ANOTHER R..ADER.

'Disagrees With 'Reader.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Every once in a while there is a letter in your column that I do not like. Such a letter was the one signed "Reader." It seems that she did not marry the man whose love for her she seemed to think so wonderful; therefore, I assume he was an already married man, and since she is now happily married to another man but still "car almost feel" the other man's arms around her, it is safe to guess she is a silly little sentimentalist, and that she is the one who has never yet experienced real love . . . To resort to slang, I would say: "Some hero and some heroine!"

UNIMPRESSED.

Education for Children.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As a consistent reader of your column, sometimes I agree with your ideas and sometimes I don't. I think you were entirely wrong in your advice to "R. G. C.," the aunt who wished to provide special music education for her 8-year-old niece, but who couldn't "sell" the child's mother on the idea. I am a mother of four boys and if one of them merited special training which I was unable to finance, but which an aunt was willing and able to supply, I would feel that I was selfishly depriving him of something which was rightfully his if I didn't accept.

• • • •

Our American public school system is a failure for the simple reason that it tries to cram every child into the same mold. One is either born with brains or without them, and it certainly is a waste of the teacher's time to try to educate students who haven't the mentality to grasp what the teacher is trying to get across to them. It would be far better to concentrate on students of superior mental abilities and give them the special training they can absorb and make use of. There is a crying need for leaders today. My criticism is directed at the public high school system in particular.

• • • •

Incidentally, I can testify that children are naturally jealous of one another. I'm sure many other mothers will agree with me on this point. Sincerely yours, M. C. S.

Bouquet for Column.

MARY DARLING: You are the nuts! . . . But seriously, your column is a honey. After reading "R. G. C.'s" letter (the lady who wishes to take over her niece's education and training) says I to myself—here's one problem, at long last, that's going to trip up my girl friend M. H. But after reading your reply—I give up. It's a sound set of thinking machinery you possess, Mary. More power to you. One of your more ardent admirers. J. C.

She Eavesdrops and Tells!

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I can contain myself no longer. I must speak out and say my piece. I am not, never have been, and never expect to be a Government employe, so I hope my opinion may be considered as unbiased. I am a married woman, but there was a time when I was a widow in Washington, and as such saw something of the men in this city. I never lacked for dates and good times.

• • • •

But mercy! What males! . . . Bad mannered, stupid, bleary eyed, balded headed, loose lipped, stoop shouldered, sloppily dressed, barrel paunched, boring because bored, who know not that they know not and never take the trouble to learn, but blandly assume that they are God's gift to women . . .

• • • •

Please don't think that some Government Sheik has done me wrong. It isn't true. But I have the evidence of my own ears that a great many open-eyed women in Washington place just about the same evaluation on the majority of men in this city as I do. Where I live, my door happens to open on a telephone that is frequently brought into play by men who are trying to make dates with ladies. Time and again I have heard some men spend a whole afternoon calling girls, without success, in an effort to "make a date."

• • • •

It's my guess that the girls are getting a little fed up with that old gag that there are five girls to every one man in Washington, and therefore that she has something to be mighty thankful for if some man drops around to call and lets her have the privilege of just looking at him . . . It makes me sore to hear all this bunk about Government girls not measuring up to the exacting qualifications of the lordly Washington male. If a great many girls do come here from hick towns, there is plenty of reason to believe an equal number of men here hail from the same rustic background. And for these men to pose as the women's betters is simply ridiculous. All I ask is FAIR PLAY.

NOT everybody has gone naive, old-fashioned and girly-girly this season. There are plenty of gowns made along sophisticated lines for those who prefer a little of that woman of the world look. Such gowns are made on lines following the contour of the figure and in an age when everything seems to be romantic, continue to uphold the classical tradition. For the woman who is past the debutante stage this type of frock is often more effective than the more elaborate style with bouffant skirt and frills. And the woman who has a slender figure especially would be wise to cling to this type of gown as it brings out her best points. At right, Mary Astor, movie actress, models a sophisticated dinner gown in a daring color effect. The skirt is leaf green, the blouse purple, and the crushed belt of jersey is of rust and matching green. The Volga boatman chain necklace and bracelet are in keeping with the mood of the gown. At left, the popular draped halterline bodice is demonstrated in an evening gown of berry red chiffon created by Lucien Lelong. It has a draped royal blue sash.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Old Grad.

Well, the old campus looks about the same. Only it seems so . . . so much smaller. I know the Arts College wasn't that close to the Science building; still, there's the library . . . and the big elm. How lovely and peaceful everything is! Like a toy world. If I could stay here a long, long time . . . away from all the fuss and clatter . . . and live leisurely . . . and think . . . and get hold of myself. This is really the way to live. Life is so unnatural in cities.

• • • •

"Oh, hello Barbara! Of course I knew you! . . . No, you haven't changed a bit . . . Well, I guess none of us can wear a size 14 any more . . . Yes, we must get together and have a long talk. I'm dying to hear all about you. How long are you going to be here? . . . Good! I'm staying four days, too . . . Yes, wouldn't you love to stay forever? It's so beautiful!"

• • • •

To think that is Barbara Blake! And she used to have the best figure in the gym class! Well I know one thing—I haven't changed THAT much. The whole trouble with women is they let themselves go. How pretty those college seniors are! And so young! Why they're mere children! Girls seem to be getting through college younger every year. What on earth can those children do out in the world? . . . Now that woman looks as if she knew me. Surely I didn't go to school with HER. . . .

• • • •

"Oh, how do you do? . . . Oh, yes, I know you, all right . . . You're . . . you're Effie . . . Effie . . . Oh, yes, of course, 'Powers.' I knew your face perfectly . . . No, really, you haven't changed a bit . . . yes, I remember, you married Jim . . . Jim . . . yes (Marshall) . . . You have? Three! . . . How marvelous! . . . Oh, you really think I haven't? . . . Really, I was beginning to feel like an old woman among all these young girls . . . Yes, we must have a good talk . . . Well, I'm staying three or four days—three, anyway."

• • • •

Effie Powers! I'd never have known her. It seems so funny that she and I were in the same class. Still I guess I'm not so young myself when you get down to it. But anyway I don't look that old. I may be a little tired now but its only because I didn't get enough rest last night. A strange bed and everything. And people in these little towns always rout you out so early. Here come some more college girls. That one on the end can't be a day over 15! Now who are those two funny women?

• • • •

"Oh, hello Martha! . . . Hello, Jane . . . I'm so GLAD to see you. I did TOO know you both—just as soon as you got close enough . . . Why, you haven't changed a bit, either one of you! . . . You haven't taken on a pound, Martha. How do you do it? . . . Well, it's nice of you to say that, but I'm really a wreck today . . . You didn't, either? . . . Well, a strange bed does make a difference . . . Yes, isn't it lovely here? I'm so thrilled to be back . . . Yes, we must have a long talk . . . Oh, I'll be here two or three days—two, anyway."

• • • •

Well Martha Jenks has certainly kept her figure—but the way she's broken around the eyes is terrible. And Jane Botts certainly ought to do something about her chin. . . . I MUST remember to hold my head up. And watch my shoulders. . . . What marvelous skins these college girls have! So fresh and clear. . . . Well I suppose if a woman stays thin she gets that faded look—like Martha. And if she doesn't, she gets that settled look—like Jane. Here come some more college seniors. I didn't know there were that many young girls in the world . . . I wonder what makes me so tired. I believe I'll go in the library and sit down awhile.

• • • •

"Oh, beg pardon? . . . Well, your face looks familiar to me, too . . . Oh, of course, Mabel Watts! . . . No, I'm Mary Brown . . . Oh, no, it wasn't that you had changed at all—your name just slipped me . . . Yes, isn't it all lovely? . . . Yes, it does take you back to your youth . . . Well, I WAS planning to stay two days but I may have to go home a little sooner."

• • • •

Mabel Watts! And to think she didn't know me! Well anyway I KNOW I haven't aged as much as she has. The trouble is I guess I'm getting a little tired and beginning to show it. All this quiet makes you sort of let down. That's one thing about a city. It keeps you on your toes. . . . I really must go over to the library . . . and sit down awhile. I'm tired! Heavens! Here come some more of those darned college girls! . . . You know I wonder—now if I could get a train out of here late tomorrow. . . .

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, June 24.

A VERY FEW people in this scrambling anthill of a otwn are almost constantly in the news, by virtue of their personal glow, their nocturnal didoes or the shimmer of the names. And of all the perennially newsworthy ladies of the village, no names appear more steadily than those of the lovely Morgan twins, Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt and Thelma, Lady Furness. And, alas, mostly unhappily!

At the moment the girls are again in newsprint and photographs because of business troubles in the gown shop they have been helping to run here for the last few years. They and their partner, Mrs. Sonia Rosenberg, are neck deep in suits and countersuits—the Morgans charging mismanagement and the resultant loss of some $50,000, and Mme. Sonia countering with an allegation of breach of contract. At the same time the tasty twins are starting still another dress business called "Ladyship Gowns," for which they propose to design many of the little numbers.

All this business grief is unhappy enough when aired, but Gloria Vanderbilt is never permitted to forget the guardianship troubles surrounding her 13-year-old daughter, Gloria the Second. The child's mother just stepped off a ship in tears because the newspapers had made much of the fact that not a single member of the little girl's family had been present when she was graduated from school. Add this to the business woe and you get a notion of the personal misery that can settle on a beautiful, poised woman doing her best!

Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt is a lovely woman, zealous and charming. How she must hate "her name in the paper," and long for a quiet life with her chick!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I've just checked with my friend Charles Ritz, the Parisian whose parents own the seven famous Ritz hotels which dot the world. Charles has just finished a 10,000-mile air tour of our country, stopping at 36 of our inns, and I asked him about his experiences. He told me that of all the cooking, he liked best that of Chef Lafaille of the Olympic Hotel in Seattle; that Texas girls were the prettiest he saw, and that the efficient handling of Washington's Mayflower Hotel impressed him very much. "A hotel is no better than its manager," said the wise M. Ritz, and I agreed.

• • • •

Well, my after-dinner problems have faded away since I became the owner of one of those astonishing fruit and vegetable mixers promoted by Fred Waring, the bandboy. No more dizzy talk, no pencil and paper games. I just say, "Now, folks, if you will step into the kitchen I will work the mixer for you!" It is an astonishing gadget, and I've thrown almost every known type of growing thing into its maw and produced frothy, cooling drinks that almost invariably taste good.

Mixing of Materials In Dresses Suggested

Paris (U.P.).—Mix materials with the same spirit of nonchalance with which you mix colors this summer.

Velvet is to any dress as a dash of bitters is to a cocktail. You'll find navy velvet a favorite in seemingly incongruous combinations. A wide navy velvet corselet encircles Paquin's filmy evening frock of white organza. Horizontal bands of the same velvet are set in the bouffant skirt.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

WHEN IT APPEARS that you are losing weight too rapidly in your face, there is something very wrong with your reducing program. Without any loss of fatty tissue from the face, your face may look thinner because of its drawn expression. This is caused by the physiological strains of improper diet, rapid weight loss and no exercise.

You will feel tired and look it on a diet deficient in protein, as many lopsided reducing diets are. Protein is the element which keeps up your strength and is essential in any diet. You should have daily a liberal serving of lean meat or fish, one or two eggs, skim milk, buttermilk or cheese. Add to these foods fresh vegetables and fruits and a small amount of whole grain bread and butter and you have a balanced low-calorie menu.

Safe Reducing Diet.

On the average 1,200-calorie diet, from 300 to 400 calories are obtained from the protein foods. The foods which are added to balance the menu, the fruits and vegetables, supply the remaining 800 to 900 calories, with the exception of about 200 calories which may, if you like, be allotted to such extras as desserts.

A safe reducing diet contains from 1,000 to 1,600 calories, the exact number depending upon your structure and activity. With light exercise you use 16 calories per pound of normal body weight. In order to reduce, your calorie intake should be cut to two-thirds the allowance for normal weight. Be sure that you estimate your calorie requirements on the basis of normal weight, for excess fatty tissue uses few calories and is excluded from your calculations.

To reduce your weight without affecting your health, you must draw on stored calories for no more than one-third of your energy requirement. Otherwise your vitality will be lowered and you will show the strain of reducing.

As long as you follow a balanced menu supplying two-thirds of your calorie requirements you will lose weight at the rate of one to two pounds a week, and this is a perfectly safe rate at which to lose for the first two or three months. From then on you lose more slowly.

The third requirement in a satisfactory reducing program is exercise. Insufficient exercise reacts on the musculature, causing weakness and depression. Exercise not only helps you to reduce proportionately but it builds vitality and keeps you feeling and looking young.

Reduce scientifically and there will be no physiological strains to show in your face.

Miss Frida Kondrup Frazer Married At Virginia Home to W. T. Winslow

Combining the exotic with family tradition in her choice of a wedding gown, Miss Frida Kondrup Frazer, daughter of Mrs. Randolph Leigh, was married at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon to Walter Thacher Winslow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Nickerson Winslow, of Boston, Mass.

The bride's gown was a Chinese brocade model which her aunt, Mrs. W. Calhoun Stirling, had worn at her wedding, and which had been brought from China by a naval officer. The dress was simply made, with a fitted bodice and full skirt terminating in a shallow train. The veil was antique rosepoint lace which had been worn by three generations of brides before Miss Frazer. She carried an arm bouquet of white Easter lilies.

Ceremony Performed In Drawing Room

The drawing room at Ranleigh, estate of the bride's family near McLean, Va., was the scene of the ceremony. The Rev. W. Russell Bowie, of Grace Church, in New York, uncle of the bridegroom, officiated.

The couple were married before a mantelpiece on which were masses of white lilies flanked with candles in silver candelabra. An aisle of white satin, bordered with white stanchions and lilies, led to the small pre-dieu which had been erected for the occasion. Mirrored brackets attached to the green wall were festooned with delphiniums and lilies.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her stepfather, had as her matron of honor her cousin, Miss Margheritta Stirling, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. Calhoun Stirling, of Washington. She wore a bouffant blue frock of organdy, made with a shirred bodice, a large picture hat of the same material, and carried African daisies.

The bridesmaids were "glamor girl" Aerielle Frazer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Washington Frazer, of Grosse Point, Mich., and Newport, another cousin of the bride; Mrs. John C. White, of New Britain, Conn., sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. A. N. Winslow, jr., of Boston, his sister-in-law. They were attired in yellow organdy frocks made like that of the maid of honor, and carried bouquets of blue delphinium.

Richard Sears Winslow served as his brother's best man, and the ushers were Andrew Nickerson Winslow, jr., another brother; Beverly Bowie, of New York, a cousin; Dr. John C. White, brother-in-law of the brideroom; Randolph Leigh, jr., stepbrother of the bride, and Lucius Wilmerding and Donald Hiss, of Washington.

During the ceremony, which was witnessed only by members of the two families and close friends, Mildred Dilling, famous harpist who has played several times at the White House, performed on her instrument.

When she left for her wedding trip, the bride was wearing a smart Dubonnet printed silk and a sheer hat to match, with shoes, bags and gloves of Dubonnet. She carried a bright blue coat. After a trip to the West Coast, with a stopover at Lake Louise and Banff, in Canada, the couple will reside in a cottage being built on the grounds of Ranleigh.

Many From Capital Attend Reception

Several hundred guests attended the reception, which was held on the spacious lawn of Ranleigh. The bridal party received in the garden, while champagne was served on the sun porch and a three-tiered wedding cake graced the buffet in the dining room. Miss Stirling, the maid of honor, caught the bride's bouquet.

Seen here and there were: Mrs. Patrick Hurley, in a black silk frock trimmed with pink and a hat to match; Mrs. Emlen Davies (Miss Emlen Davies flew up to New York yesterday to welcome her father, Joseph Davies, Ambassador to Belgium, who arrived from Europe); Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., with the latter's sister, Miss Anne Perin; Mrs. Donald Hiss and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, the latter in a brown organza frock with a broad-brimmed leghorn hat.

Others who strolled about the lawn were Mr. and Mrs. William Barron Kerkham, Mr. and Mrs. Landra Platt, Mrs. Platt wearing a pink and white print frock; Mr. and Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, the Misses Alice and Laura Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet, Mrs. Herbert Stratford, Miss Emily Moore, who will sail soon for London for her own marriage; Mrs. Samuel Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Millard West and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Marsh.

Miss Marjorie Mae Smith, her sister, was maid of honor and was dressed in a light blue chiffon frock with a smocked jacket and a small turban and face veil to match. Her flowers were light pink roses.

Margot Garrett Feted at Parties

It's been many a June moon since Washington has seen such a whirl of prenuptial parties to equal the teas and dinners given in honor of popular Miss Margot Garrett and her equally popular fiance, Mariano Zuberbuhler, the handsome Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy.

Last evening Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins took a hand in the entertaining, and gave the bride-elect and the prospective bridegroom a dinner at which 18 were present. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett, parents of Miss Garrett; Senor and Senora Juan Carlos Acebal, and Senorita Adela Zuberbuhler. The Acebals and Senorita Zuberbuhler arrived in Washington from the Pampas on Thursday.

Then yesterday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss combined a swimming party in their pool and a tea on their terrace at Dumbarton Oaks for the young couple whose wedding will take place on Wednesday.

But this isn't all . . . on Monday evening the Belgian Embassy will be the scene of another dinner at which the Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz will entertain the bride-to-be and prospective bridegroom.

* * * *

Mrs. Walter G. Distler, who will leave Washington next Wednesday for New York, will be among the guests on July 4 at a house party to be given by "Mike" Lynch, at Quogue, Long Island. Other Washingtonians who will attend include Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja.

After their return the Distlers will remain in town until August. Then they plan either to go to Saratoga or to take a short trip to Europe.

Their son, Walter G. Distler, jr., will spend the summer at Camp Sunapee, in New Hampshire, while their little daughter, "Sunny" Distler, will be at Camp Tagiwitha, in the Poconos, for several weeks.

On Thursday she was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mrs. Geoffrey B. Marriott.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Making Home Here

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Irving, jr., who were married early this month in Cumberland, Md., arrived in Washington recently from their wedding trip and are now at home at 644 Massachusetts avenue.

Their wedding took place in the rectory of St. Patrick's Church, with the Rev. James A. Dwyer officiating. The bride, who was formerly Miss Frances Catherine Connell, was given in marriage by her father, William M. Connell. Mrs. William A. Vandergrift, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Irvine B. Irving, of Washington, was best man.

Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast at the Fort Cumberland Hotel. A number of guests from Washington and other cities attended. The bride is a graduate of the Catholic High School and of the Providence Hospital Nursing School of Washington. Mr. Irving received his B. A. and M. A. degrees at George Washington University, and at present holds the Parke-Davis fellowship at the university. He will receive his Ph. D. next year.

About The Town

DUDLEY HARMON

WHEN I used to see athletic Jane Dahlman striding about the campus at Smith College, I never thought that three years hence I would be interviewing her as Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, and the country's youngest cabinet hostess.

In those days Mrs. Ickes was not considered a glamour girl, nor is she one now, despite the efforts of tabloid headline writers to make her into a Titian haired femme fatale. She was completely natural, interested in the more serious things of life, yet with a grand sense of humor; eager to do her part in college by serving on various committees, and good enough at sports to make her class swimming and tennis teams. Her family back in Milwaukee was well-to-do and prominent in society, yet the social whirl of the campus, such as it is, was not her main interest.

* * * *

THE 25-year-old bride, who yesterday received several members of the press at her home, Headwaters Farm, near Olney, Md., hasn't changed a bit since informal college days. She is completely natural and unaffected and tremendously eager to do a good job as the wife of an important official.

"After all," she say, "during the two months I spent at the American Legation in Dublin with my uncle, the Minister, I grew accustomed to official entertaining. The American envoy there outranks the other diplomats, and when I attended dinners with my aunt and uncle, I got to recognize that look in the eye which means "We'd better leave so the other guests can go."

* * * *

MRS. ICKES loves the country, but denies she will go in for farming. "Unfortunately, I am susceptible to hay fever," she said, "and have to keep a healthy distance from anything which will aggravate it." She was pleased to discover a tennis court on the grounds of her new home, and looks forward to many a game there this summer. The Secretary ceased playing several years ago, owing to "tennis elbow."

A confirmed New Dealer, even before she became engaged to the Secretary, Mrs. Ickes reads everything she can get her hands on. She is interested in politics, but does not feel that during the present period of economic distress it would be right for her to take any paid job.

At present in the throes of unpacking, Mrs. Ickes looks forward to a summer of "puttering" about the house, she said yesterday. Last year the Secretary had the interior repainted and papered, with advice from his future bride, and now it presents a cheerful picture, with its white woodwork and gaily patterned wallpaper. Some of the furniture came with the house, the rest belongs to the Secretary, and Mrs. Ickes hopes to add a few pieces here and there.

The living room is particularly attractive, with a wide fireplace flanked by two comfortable sofas covered in blue, and yesterday vases of red and white roses added to the effect. Along the back of the house is a wide screened porch, which looks out on a sweep of lawn ending in a small formal garden. There are many fine pieces of old furniture, including a highboy in the dining room and a maple chest of drawers in one of the bedrooms.

MRS. ICKES adores music and has already unpacked her extensive collection of classical records. One of the wedding presents which pleased her most was a large combination radio and victrola given her by a government agency.

An amateur photographer, Mrs. Ickes does all the printing and developing herself and hopes to convert one spot of her house into a dark room.

Because she likes to do things, the red-haired young woman got a job two years ago in the National Park Service. During those months she joined in the social life of the young New Deal crowd here, and among her friends were Thomas Corcoran and Ben Cohen. She much prefers informal parties where you can concentrate on conversation to the formal kind, but enjoys social life in general.

D. C. Women Are Hostesses in Tour and Tea Party For 130 European Members of Soroptimist Club

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The United States is the friendliest country in the world and Washington the most beautiful city, in the opinion of the European members of the Soroptimist Club, who were entertained here yesterday by the local Soroptimists. Nearly 130 came from abroad to attend the international federation, just closed at Atlantic City—the largest delegation of women ever to come to this country for such a meeting, according to the travel agencies which planned their trip.

After a sight-seeing tour of Washington which took them to the White House, Pan American Building, the Lincoln Memorial, the Capitol and, in the afternoon to Mount Vernon, they were entertained at tea at the clubhouse of the Women's City Club. Despite the summer heat, greater than that to which most of the visitors were accustomed, they all declared they had enjoyed themselves and expressed surprise at how much "at home" they felt in Washington.

"Even in our own regional club meetings, we do not make friends as we have here and certainly not in any other country where we have been," said Miss Constance Bletz, of Amsterdam, secretary-treasurer of the Soroptimst Federation of Continental Europe. On every side, throughout the afternoon, there were similar comments and expressions of appreciation for the hospitality and friendship of the American women.

Miss Miejers Heads Woman's Bank

Miss Bletz is a notray public. Practically all of the delegates from the Netherlands were professional women. Miss Clara Miejers, of Amsterdam, president of the Soroptimist Federation of Continental Europe, is president of a women's bank in Holland. Miss L. Roeters van Lennep, of Haarlem, Holland, conducts a Montssori school. Miss Elizabeth Gualtherie-van Weezel, of Utrecht, is legal adviser for a public utilities company; Miss Maris Rebel, superintendent of the general hospital in Haarlem; Dr. Marie Koning, of The Hague, legal adviser to the Dutch Dairy Companies; Dr. Ina Aukes, of Amsterdam, a psychiatrist; Dr. Nicoletta Bruining, a doctor of divinity, and Dr. P. Elisabath Brugsma, of The Hague, a nerve specialist.

Miss Betty Jones, of the local club, entertained the Dutch visitors at an informal buffet supper at her home last night. Most of them are not leaving until this morning, although many of the British group departed last night.

Miss Elizabeth Hawes, president of the Soroptimist Federation of Great Britain and Ireland, placed a wreath on the Tomb of Washington during the delegation's visit to Mount Vernon and also contributed to the program at the tea yesterday afternoon, singing a group of songs and making a brief talk, in which she spoke for all of the foreign guests, expressing their thanks.

Miss Hawes, who is from London, is an optician, carrying on her profession in the same place where her family has been making spectacles for a hundred years. "My grandfather used to ride to work on horseback," she told me. "Now our method of transportation has changed, but the place is the same."

Labor Officials Among Delegates

Miss Dorothy Johnson, treasurer of the British federation, is a resident of Nottingham, president of the Nottingham Club, and is one of majesty's inspectors of factories. Two other British visitors whose work is in the labor field were Miss Ada Outhwaite and Miss Carrie Tall, both trade boards inspectors with the ministry of labor. They were greeted by Miss Dorothy Sells, of Brookings Institution, who last year made a study of the British system and wrote on it when she returned.

Miss Johnson was one of the few who not only did not mind the heat but welcomed it. "It is wonderful to feel the sun," she said. "I have never been warm enough in England."

Mrs. Cockcroft, past president of the British Federation, was less fortunate in her reaction to the weather and found it so warm she was obliged to cut her program short before the hour of the tea. She had charge of organizing the party of foreign delegates and is credited with having been responsible for the large number who came. She arranged all the transportation.

Another among the British guests was Miss Ann E. Gardiner, O. B. E., president of the Greater London Club, who held a high post in civil service from which she is now retired, and was decorated for her service to the government. Mrs. Mary Willetts, a "speaker of verse and prose," was there accompanied by her husband, Charles Henry Willetts, the lone man in the party of 130 women.

Among others were Miss Dora Warren, secretary of the British Federation; Miss Margaret Boath, of Dundee, Scotland; Miss Alice Copeland, of Aberdeen; Miss Laura Ruffell Sutton, of Surrey.

Mrs. Mary Catherine Lewis was hostess for the local club and had receiving with her Mrs. Agnes Newman, local president, Miss Meijers and Miss Hawes, and later in the afternoon, Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, newly-elected second vice president of the American Federation. Many of the hostess group had also just returned from the Atlantic City convention.

Other members of the hostess committee were: Mrs. Jesta Richards and Miss Alva McNamara, who poured, Mrs. Edgar T. Brown, Mrs. Caroline Stephens and Miss Mary Bourke.

Music in addition to the group of songs by Miss Hawes, included solos and duets by Charlotte LaFond, contralto, and Erna Embrie, soprano, accompanied by Mrs. Jewell Downes, who also played for Miss Hawes.

The visitors will go from Washington to Chicago and will stop at Niagara Falls on their return to New York, whence they will sail for home.

Nanny Meadow Mouse Moves

Because, Mayhap, conditions change,
The once familiar seemeth strange.
—Nanny Meadow Mouse.

Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse spent the winter very comfortably in a snug home on the Green Meadows. In a shallow burrow in the ground they had as snug and comfortable a nest of grass as any Meadow Mouse could desire. One thing that made this home especially desirable and satisfactory was its location. When they had decided to make their home there they had not realized what an ideal location it was. It had seemed like a good place for a home. There was plenty of food available and no other Mice in the immediate neighborhood. So they had their home there and made a good one.

"Danny," said she, "have you noticed how seldom we have to run for our lives?"

It was not until they had lived there a while that they began to realize how well they had chosen. Just by chance they had chosen a place that for no apparent reason was seldom visited by others. It was Nanny who first noticed this.

"Danny," said she, "have you noticed how seldom we have to run for our lives?"

"I hadn't thought of it but now that you have mentionde the matter, my dear, I realize that it is so," squeaked Danny.

"Reddy Fox hasn't been over here more than once or twice since we moved here and even Hooty the Owl and Roughleg the Hawk seldom bother us," continued Nanny in her funny squeaky voice.

"I wonder why," remarked Danny.

"I think I know," said Nanny.

"Why?" asked Danny.

"Because we are the only people for quite a distance around here," replied Nanny. "Reddy and Mrs. Reddy do not pass near here on the way to their regular hunting-grounds, and when they have come over here they have had no luck. If there were a lot of other Mice living here we would have plenty of trouble," explained Nanny.

Danny nodded. "That must be it, my dear," said he.

"It is wonderful for us, but not so good for the children," remarked Nanny.

Danny gave her a funny look. "I should say that it couldn't be better for the children. We don't have to worry about them," said he.

Nanny shook her head. "How are we to train children to be afraid when there is nothing to fear? How are we to train them to be always on the watch for enemies when no enemies come around?" she demanded.

"I hadn't thought of that," confessed Danny. "No, sir, I hadn't thought of that. Fear is the greatest safeguard a Mouse has. I never realized this until I grew up. I used to think it was dreadful, but now I know it is a blessing for I have discovered that those Mice who are the least timid are the ones who have the shortest lives. It is necessary to be familiar with danger to properly fear it. You are right about the children, my dear. You are quite right."

Of course she was right. Where there is seldom danger people soon learn to be unafraid and those without fear soon become careless. It is a law of life. So it is not always best to be too safe. Only a very few will continue to watch for the enemy who never appears. But in time there came a change. The children of Danny and Nanny went forth and they had children of their own. Other Mice moved into the neighborhood. Where there had been only a few private runways cut through the grass by Danny and Nanny there were now runways criss-crossing in every direction. That neighborhood was no longer overlooked by Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy, Hooty the Owl and other enemies. Indeed, it sometimes seemed that seldom was there a minute day or night when some enemy was not present watching for a careless or too venturesome Mouse.

And so in the spring Nanny suddenly decided to move. "We need a change," declared she. "We need a little peace. This neighborhood isn't what it used to be." So in the dark of the moon Nanny turned her back on her comfortable home and started to look for another. She looked back just once. It was to see if Danny was following. He was.

Charm and deadliness were combined in the new arrivals yesterday at the Zoo. The charming creatures are the rare "pottos"—lemurs (at left). The Zoo has had none of these slow-moving balls of fur in many years. For the first time in its history, the Zoo has acquired a pair of brush-tailed porcupines (above). These beasts, also friendly, have a brush-like bunch of quills on their tail. The deadly creature is the Gaboon viper (at right), which is being posed by Silas E. Johnson, who collected all the new arrivals in West Africa. The reptile has fangs 2 inches long but will not strike until thoroughly aroused. There is no antivenom for its bite.

To the Boston bluebloods, Mrs. Roosevelt is something of a perplexity . . . As a Boston Cushing, Betsy Roosevelt may talk to the Lowells and Cabots, if she likes. But she seems (to their amazement) to prefer livelier company. She adores, for example, the Braggiotti clan, although on Beacon Hill Braggiotti is not deemed an old Boston name.

"—she perplexes the Brahmins."

Horror of horrors, she even enjoys a sortie into "cafe society," and once passed up elegant functions in Washington and Boston to attend one of Elsa Maxwell's socials. She has ducked the stiffer sort of parties often enough that a few of the stiffer people are vexed with her . . . Fortunately, as a Boston Cushing she is armored against their displeasure.

PAJAMA PORTRAITS.
REFORMED JOURNALIST.

A new man to reckon with in Washington is gray-thatched, handsome, spiritual Lowell Mellett . . . As a reformed journalist, who resigned not long ago from a Scripps-Howard editorship; he has with the New Dealers the joyful status of a repentant sinner . . . But his heart has always been with Roosevelt. He is a brother of the crusading Don Mellett who was shot out of a Canton, Ohio, editorial chair by a vengeful gangster. He had his choice of several jobs, including the Ambassadorship to Russia, and discussed with Ambassador Troyanovsky the possibility of living up to the Moscow job within an Ambassador's wages. The sage U. S. S. R. diplomat wisely shook his head. Mellett is quite solvent, though; he has lived simply, saved his money and is developing a 9-hole golf course in his spacious grounds in nearby Alexandria's fashionable Seminary Hill. Now he has some $900,000 to spend in his new post as chief of the somewhat mystical National Emergency Council . . . It is a moot question whether this will involve co-ordination, Federal publicity or political evangelism . . . Or a combination of all three. (As FDR puts it, it depends on which paper you're writing for.) Currently he is ranked vaguely as one of the dozen inner-circle New Dealers.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Because he fights so pugnaciously for Federal sheckels, Senator Pepper is called "the Ambassador from Florida." . . . Some of the Bostonians are rumored to have kept their gloves on when they shook hands with the President at Son John's wedding . . . Incidentally, only the Homer Cummingses, the Henry Morgenthaus and Jim Farley, of the Cabinet, were invited, and Alice Longworth wasn't, though 21 Roosevelts were present.

"Extra! Headline amuses FDR!"

When callers ask FDR at the White House about Honest Hal Ickes' return from his honeymoon the President is apt to open a drawer in his desk and flaunt a headline in the French newspaper Figaro: "American Minister of Interior Reaches Paris Tired But Happy."

Apparently it's even funnier in French; the President and guests usually laugh uproariously.

Perhaps the American frame of mind may be guessed by the horse laugh which follows a scene in a current news reel in which Snell, of the Republican minority, says Congress was terrible, while Sumners, of the Democratic majority, says it was marvelous. The bronx cheer seems aimed equally at both sides.

CAPITAL CAPERS: In riding two floors on the Capitol elevator, from the tunnel to the Senate floor, Senator Reynolds (N. C.) can get intimately acquainted with every woman in the car . . . In moments of candor Francis Biddle, new lawyer for the TVA probers, tells friends that "The Folklore of Capitalism," by Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, the monopoly prober, is perhaps the best book on the capitalistic system . . . Since Deanna Durbin's bicycling song in her last picture, it's hazardous walking along the Potomac to Haines Point; the girl cyclists are as thick as foreign spies.

District Man Says Autoists Ignore Safety

By Howard F. Wentworth.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, June 24.—The attitude of individual motorists toward problems of traffic safety was attacked here today by Burton W. Marsh, of Washington, safety and engineering director of the American Automobile Association, at final sessions of the commercial investment trust seminar of safety.

He scored the motoring public for it's refusal to accept responsibility essential to the advancement of highway safety, but at the same time predicted steadily increasing driver-interest in the problem as time progresses.

Laws Declared Fair.

"The average automobile owner," said Marsh, "has no great interest in the traffic problem as a whole. He sees it as it affects his own daily use of the car. He feels he has purchased an automobile for personal transportation and is critical of all that interferes with its maximum use."

Motorists who read daily newspapers, Marsh told the visiting newspapermen, realize there are far too many accidents. Yet it rarely happens, he added, that the average car owner has anything like a real knowledge of the tremendous number of accidents, injuries and fatalities involved.

Quoting from a recent A. A. A. poll of 9,000 motorists in 15 widely scattered cities Marsh revealed that the majority of drivers are satisfied with the fairness of existing motor laws.

Overwhelming sentiment, however, was shown for strict enforcement of these laws, the safety director declared. More than 90 per cent of the drivers questioned, he said, favored a more rigid policy of enforcement of all traffic regulations.

Education Held Need.

Severe penalties for major violations—including drunken driving and hit-and-run—also were favored by those who responded to the poll, Marsh said.

In almost every instance, he continued, car owners strongly advocated a system of pedestrian control for congested urban centers.

Marsh stressed the necessity of driver and pedestrian education as a means of securing new degrees of highway safety and urged the newspaper delegates to initiate this phase of traffic control work in their home communities.

Climaxing a week of discussions devoted to all angles of traffic safety, the 50 delegates from key cities across the country agreed to return home and lend a new stimulus to the never-ending battle to save lives.

The heard Dr. Miller McClintock, director of the Yale Bureau of Street and Traffic Research, describing the "city of the future" and what is being done in long range traffic planning.

In a unique presentation, illustrated with films, Dr. McClintock gave the seminar "students" a dramatic picture of what lies ahead. Depicting a maze of elevated roadways skirting the very sides of business section skyscrapers, the safety engineer admitted his picture "would seem visionary were it not for advances already made in engineering designs."

New Streets Predicted.

"It is inevitable," said Mr. McClintock, "that American cities will progressively provide themselves with comprehensive systems of limited-way type of construction. These systems will connect urban areas with the surrounding and radiating highway systems."

These modernized high-speed roads, Dr. McClintock predicted, will lead into and through all important portions of the community, being superimposed above the existing street system.

Another highlight of today's concluding sessions was an address by Clifford B. Ward, of the Fort Wayne (Ind.) News Sentinel, a delegate to last year's C. I. T. safety seminar.

Ward described how he returned home and succeeded in securing a complete new highway safety program for his city. He enlisted the aid of local authorities, Ward said, and aroused public sentiment to such a degree that the community now enjoys a safety record never before equaled.

Kadens Speaks in D. C.

Staying out of tight places in traffic requires more driving skill than getting out of them. Joseph Kadens, safety director of the United States Army Corps, of Engineers, said last night at a meeting of the Accident Prevention Institute of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. He spoke on "Opposite Direction Accidents."

Kadens discussed typical accidents likely to involve vehicles traveling in opposite directions and emphasized precautions necessary to avoid such accidents. The institute will hold its next meeting in the Traffic Court Building Friday night, with Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District branch of the American Automobile Association, speaking on "Highway and Street Manners."

Military Plan Given Study by Colored Group

3 New Companies May Be Added to 372d Infantry in D. C.

Legislation for authorization of three new companies of the 372d Infantry was given special study by a committee of the Federation of Civic Associations last night at a meeting held in the board room at the District Building.

Woolsey W. Hall was added to the education committee, and the committee was given power to act in the summer recess with reference to qualifications for night school teachers.

Endorsement of the stand taken by Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson for a thorough reconditioning of Cardozo High School and other buildings during the summer months was voted. The Washington Post was commended for its reports of honors and prizes won in colored schools and colleges.

Slow Up and Drink Water in Summer, Ruhland Advises

Slow up your pace and walk on the shady side of the street to counteract the effect of hot weather, Health Officer George Ruhland advised yesterday.

Also, a drink of cool water sipped slowly every few hours will help markedly to keep the body comfortable. It is one of the oldest and most universal methods of cooling the body, Ruhland said.

Three more hints and summer weather will be a pushover. Here they are:

Sponge off with cool water several times a day and take a shower or two for good measure.

D. C. Man Honored By Augustinians

The Rev. Augustine M. Maloney, regent of studies at the Augustinian College here, was elected definitor of the North American Province of Augustinian Fathers at a meeting of the Order at Villanova College, Philadelphia, the Associated Press reported last night.

Father Maloney, as definitor, will be chief of the official advisory board of superior jurisdiction for the Augustinian Order throughout the Nation.

Educated in Rome, Father Maloney was ordained there in 1928. He came to the college here, which is associated with Catholic University, in 1931.

Church Youth Told Future Rests on Them

Christian Endeavor Group Closes Convention After Banquet.

The future of America rests in your hands and as America goes, so goes the world, the Rev. George E. Schnabel told 300 delegates last night at the closing session of the District Christian Endeavor convention at Sherwood Presbyterian Church.

Asserting that "youth has an engagement with destiny," the speaker, minister at Albright Memorial Church, urged the young people to "be Christian where you are," and to develop into Christian statesmen, lawyers, doctors, Red Cross workers and other citizens who can set an example for the rest of the world to follow.

Praising the accomplishments of Mrs. L. C. Greene, for many years an advisor of local youth groups, the Rev. Mr. Schnabel pointed out that "you are the most fortunate young people in Washington in having such a remarkable leader." Mrs. Greene was presented with a testimonial gift at the dinner held earlier in the evening.

Wilton Fraser, vice president of the intermediate union, last night presented awards to Alice Bellinger, of the Sherwood society, and to Janet Fisher, of the Wall group. Among those ace Memorial who contributed to the success of the convention were Dorothy Brown, vice president of the union; Patricia Williams, chairman of the convention; Guy Cogswell, Hillman Harris and L. C. Greene.

Yesterday afternoon a wreath was placed on the tomb of George and Martha Washington at Mount Vernon, where a service also was held under the Christian Endeavor tree planted in 1896 by Dr. Francis Clarke, organizer of the movement. Hazel McGeary presided.

King Ponders Outsider for Tax Inquiry

900 Refused Licenses for Failing to Pay Receipts Levy.

An outsider hired for the job may conduct the newest $10,000 study of District revenue potentialities instead of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that 900 Washington business and professional operators of the 1,200 who failed to obtain business privilege tax licenses filed applications prior to the June 17 deadline.

Failed to Pay Tax.

Licenses were denied them, however, with the remaining 300, for failure to pay last year's gross receipts taxes, it was pointed out. Administrator Allen F. Brooks said he doubted that the $5 penalty for the late applications for licenses would apply to the 900 operators since the new tax law states the penalty may be affixed if the operators fail "to apply."

While the District considered its tax problems, a conference of officials and civic and trade representatives with a tax expert of the joint committee was called by Senator King for Monday. The group will determine how the study is to be made.

The committee staff is so busy with the national tax studies that it would prefer to be relieved of the District task, King pointed out.

"We may have to go outside and hire an expert to do the job for us," King said.

Carried in Supply Bill.

The appropriation was carried in the 1939 District supply bill. The joint committee was designated by the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations.

Tax studies made by a special citizens' committee and a group of District officials named by the Commissioners were ignored by the House sub-committee which drafted the most recent tax act.

Senator King, who is chairman of the Senate District Committee, is expected to direct the inquiry with the acquiescence of the joint committee.

Regarding the business privilege tax situation, Brooke pointed out the operators whose licenses were refused because they had not paid their gross receipt tax still could escape the penalty and possible court action if the tax and license fee of $10 were paid before July 1.

Seamen to Sign Longer Contracts Under New Order

American seamen who, until now, have been signing articles for one voyage at a time, may sign for long periods, under an order issued yesterday by the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation of the Department of Commerce.

The order is expected to make for stability in the maritime labor field by reducing the enormous turnover of crews. It also is expected to lead privately owned steamship companies to offer bonuses to seamen who remain on their ships for long periods, as already is done by the Maritime Commission in its Government-owned fleet.

Some time ago maritime labor unions were accused of "pulling" crews from ships after a voyage and sending fresh crews aboard, even though men in the original crew wanted to say. This "rotation" system, if it ever was used, has now been abandoned.

Boy, Girl Caught On Plane Here as $3,000 Is Missed

Arrested at Washington Airport after a Pennsylvania Central Airlines plane had been held in the air 15 minutes awaiting police, a boy and girl were held in Arlington County jail late last night for Allegheny County, Pa., authorities. They were wanted in connection with the disappearance of approximately $3,000 missed by the girl's mother after she left home yesterday.

They gave their names as Jennie Michalica, 18, of Heidelberg, Pa., and Paul Leschak, 19, of Carnegie, Pa. Airport authorities, asked by Allegheny County police to hold the plane and arrest the couple, called Arlington police and notified Pilot Harry Smith to circle until police arrived. Then, 15 minutes after its 10:14 p. m. scheduled landing, police arrived, the plane came in and the arrest was made.

The girl carried a gray week-end bag which, when opened by Arlington police, was found to contain $2,194 in small bills, a gray riding habit and tan boots. The girl also carried $164, police said.

Morgenthau Cools Heels as President And Shirley Chat

By the Associated Press.

The child actress, accompanied by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Temple, called at the White House for a chat with the Chief Executive.

As they came out, someone remarked that the visit had delayed Morgenthau's appointment.

"But what we were talking about," Shirley said, "was important."

The lamb chops, it turned out, were some Shirley had for luncheon earlier this week.

Gold Bricks, Bogus Heroin Jail Trio Here

What Treasury agents said appeared to be a plot to foist a quantity of bogus heroin on the Washington underworld was shattered yesterday with the arrest of three men and confiscation of the fake drug and six pounds of goldbricks. Police said all three men had Federal criminal records.

Advised by a Washington citizen that an attempt had been made to sell him a gold brick, Detectives William A. Schotter and Irving Lubar, of First Precinct, raided a room in a downtown hotel and arrested the alleged salesman. In the course of investigation, they entered another room where they found another man and two large jars with German labels proclaiming their contents to be heroin. Another room yielded a third man and six pounds of gold bricks.

The narcotics bureau of the Treasury Department analyzed the heroin and pronounced it plain sodium bicarbonate. The goldbricks turned out to be brass nuggets gold plated. Their promoters were held for investigation.

Treasury agents expressed the belief the fake heroin was to have been peddled as the genuine drug to underdworld denizens. They said it would have been worth $80,000 if it were genuine.

16 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, JUNE 25, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, June 24.—The Duke is hitting the ball again and the old swagger and strut has returned. Al Simmons once more is riding herd on American League pitchers and the Washington Club, too often dull and colorless, finds itself in possession of a personality.

POVICH

The Simmons bat has been boom-booming in an increasing crescendo since the Nats embarked on their latest road trip ten days ago and the Duke is chesty once more. Those were sorrowful years for Simmons, in 1935 when he batted only .267, and 1937 when he hit only .279, but he's reveling now in the sweets of a successful comeback.

Around the league, they've always called him the Duke. Ball players were quick to sense that Simmons aimed to be a big shot, and it was their way of ribbing him. But he liked the name, secretly at first, then he made no secret of it. He was strictly big shot. He tipped lavishly, obliged autograph seekers with a flourish. The roar of the mob was music to his ears.

He liked the implications of the name, the Duke. It implied that he was, indeed, a player apart from the common herd. He developed a habit of squaring his broad shoulders, impressing folks with his powerful physique. If his colleagues had sought to twit Simmons by calling him the Duke, the effects were lost upon him, because now, that is what he calls little 2-year-old Aloysius Harry Simmons, jr.—"Little Duke."

* * * *

Al Simmons last spring didn't have to sign that 1938 Washington contract which called for the lowest wages he had ever been paid in the big leagues since his second season. His reported 1938 salary of $9,000 represented a 70 per cent cut in the salary he had drawn with the Athletics in 1931-2-3. Simmons didn't have to play ball. He had invested wisely and soon would reap the benefits of a paid-up $100,000 annuity.

But he signed that Washington contract last winter and if you're asking why, the answer is simple. Simmons was not satisfied that he was through as a ball player. He was not content to quit on the sour note of a .279 batting average in 1937. He wanted to justify himself.

He wanted to hear again the cheers of the crowds applauding Al Simmons. He had never been a journeyman ball player. As a rookie with the Athletics in 1926, he was not content to be the roommate of the great Ty Cobb. He was jealous of Cobb, wanted to surpass his feats. He affected the long-sleeved uniforms of Cobb and the same baggy trousers that showed only a few inches of his legs.

And he achieved in 1930 and 1931 the fame he had sought when he led the league in batting during those seasons with averages of .381 and .390. The year before he had led the league in runs batted in and total bases.

* * * *

Simmons is proud of those records he established with the Athletics.

He's even jealous of 'em. A month ago when Coach Lena Blackburn of the A's described young Sam Chapman, Connie Mack's latest outfield sensation, as "another Simmons," Simmons was angry.

"That makes me laugh," said Simmons, but he wasn't laughing. "'Another Simmons'—that's fine talk. Why don't they wait and see if this Chapman can lead the league in most everything like Simmons did? Why do they pop off about a kid who's only been in the league a month? They've got their nerve with them!"

Two weeks ago it was a pretty sour Al Simmons who was a member of the Washington club. He wasn't playing regularly for the Nats. Manager Bucky Harris was benching him against right-handed pitching. Simmons' pride was hurt. He had always been able to hit right and left handers alike. He never admitted to any weakness against any kind of pitching.

His inactivity grated on Simmons. He was haunted by the thought, too, that young George Case was being given the preference over him. It was hard to take, hard for him who had been a transcendent star in the American League.

So he stomped in the office of Clark Griffith in Washington two weeks ago. Griffith inquired what his business was.

"We'll make it short, Griff," said Simmons. "Either play me regularly on this Washington Club or give me my release. I won't be a substitute on anybody's club."

* * * *

Griffith, who might easily have been a careerman in the diplomatic corps had he not chosen baseball as a profession talked Simmons out of his anger. He calmed him with a bright picture of Simmons' future with the club, predicting that Bucky Harris would soon make him a regular.

That happened when Johnny Stone fell ill. Simmons finally got his chance. In every city the Nats have visited on the current trip his bat has spoken in booming tones. In the ten games they have played since leaving Washington, Big Al has pounded out five home runs. He has averaged two runs driven in per game and his batting average has soared to .307.

His estimates of Al Simmons has soared, too. He is showing it with that old-time swagger and strut. For him, base hits are the nectar of the gods. Barring a disastrous slump Simmons will be primed for a knock-down-drag-out contract battle with Griffith next winter. He said last March when he signed his 1938 contract; that's the lowest salary I've signed for in 12 years. I'm just crossing this season off the book, financially. But if I have a good year up there at the dish, I'm going to make somebody pay through the nose before they get my name on another contract."

College Ring Body Makes Rule Change

New Modifications Are Expected to Bolster Slumping Sport.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., June 24.—College boxing next season will be conducted under an eligibility code and rule changes designed to promote the safety of contestants as the result of the four-day session of the National Collegiate Athletic Boxing Committee, which adjourned here today.

The committee devoted its closing session in the Navy boathouse to a rule laying down general specifications for the 12-ounce glove that takes the place of the 10-ounce mitt previously used.

The thumb of the glove will be laced to the palm and will not extend beyond the glove. The committee directed that the weight be concentrated in the striking surface, and prescribed a 2½-inch cuff, designed to prevent contestants from breaking the glove and pushing padding from over the knuckles.

Use of Adhesive Forbidden.

The use of adhesive tape for bandaging was completely outlawed, even for fastening of bandages. Bandages of soft material may be used, provided they do not extend above the boxer's knuckles.

The principal change made by the committee was the new eligibility code banning from intercollegiate boxing any contestant who has taken part in public boxing contests, other than contests between colleges, preparatory and high schools. Boxers now in college who have fought in such contests will be allowed to finish out their careers, but any college boxer taking part in any banned contest in the future will be immediately disqualified.

In order to meet the lack of lighter contestants in the bantam and featherweight classes and to prevent the strain that goes with "weight making," the bantamweight limit was raised from 115 pounds to 120 pounds, and the featherweight limit from 125 to 127 pounds. The other six weight classifications were left unchanged.

Abolish 4-Pound Spread.

The committee abolished the 4-pound spread formerly allowed boxers in weight classes, providing that they cannot exceed the weight set. Weighing in will be mandatory four hours before a meet.

Boxers knocked to the canvas will not be allowed to resume the contest until after the referee has counted nine, with the standing boxer going to a "far corner." When broken in a clinch the boxers must step back one full pace, on penalty of losing points, with disqualification for continued violation.

Boxers participating in tournaments must fight in the weight class in which they have fought at least 50 per cent of their bouts during the season.

The committee decided that the next intercollegiate boxing meet shall be held at the University of Wisconsin on March 30, 31 and April 1.

A sub-committee consisting of Capt. E. J. McGaw, boxing representative, United States Military Academy; Commander O. O. Kessing, boxing representative, Naval Academy, and Dr. Carl Schott, dean of physical education, Penn State, was formed to rule on questions of eligibility.

A press committee consisting of W. H. Cowell, athletic director, University of New Hampshire; George Little, athletic director, Rutgers, and Capt. McGaw was set up to handle press contracts for the committee.

Gun Club Will Present Extra Trophy Today

Beside the two trophies which will be given on the first 50 targets of the Washington Gun Club's regular shoot today, an added prize will be allotted for competition in the 25-target race for legs on the Cadillac Four-Month Trophy. Handicap competition really furnishes a more equitable contest, as the better shots stand at greater distances from the traps.

The trophies on the 50-target event will be given under Lewis Class system, while the prize on the 25-target handicap will be given to the highest score, regardless of the yardage at which the shooter stands. All trophies are open to club members and visitors alike, with program starting over the Benning track about 1:30 p. m.

What an outfield the Yankees will have next year when Charley Keller joins Joe DiMaggio and Tom Henrich! . . . Keller, who left Maryland University to lead the International League in batting last season, is rocketing along at a .415 clip this season . . .

It is reported that Bill Terry, manager of the National League All-Star squad, will work Hubbell, Vander Meer and Turner three innings each against the American Leaguers . . . Hitting that trio will be about as easy as slamming a cannon ball with a toothpick!

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Harvard's gallant varsity crew staved off a strong Yale challenge to win the annual race on the Thames yesterday. Here the Harvards are shown scoring their three-quarter length victory over their ancient rivals. This completed a sweep of the races, the freshmen and jayvees having won their events in the morning. A crowd of more than 50,000 watched the races.

Tigers Take Yanks, 12-8

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 24.—Hank Greenberg found a couple of "cousins" on the New York Yankees' pitching staff today, clouted his nineteenth and twentieth homers of the year and paced the Tigers to a 12 to 8 victory over the world champions.

His first four-bagger came with two aboard off Spud Chandler in the third, and his second came off Steve Sundray with one "duck on the pond" in the eighth to put the game on ice.

Jake Wade, who relieved Harry Eisenstat in the sixth, allowed just two hits and one run over the last four frames in taking credit for the win.

Homers by Lou Gehrig, Joe Gordon and Joe DiMaggio gave the Yankees an early lead, but they couldn't hold it. The defeat dropped the Yanks 4½ games behind the pace-setting Cleveland Indians.

Mrs. Moody and Budge Lead Wimbledon Tennis Advance

Owen Anderson Only American to Lose in March to Title Round; Dorothy Bundy Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, England, June 24.—Wimbledon completed its garden party stage today and got down to the serious business of deciding the tennis champions of the world.

Helen Wills Moody, playing today with Glacial Slowness, tomorrow meets Mrs. Bobbie Heine-Miller, of South Africa, in the first real crisis of the week. And even Don Budge must face Ronald Shayes, No. 1 singles player of the youthful 1938 British Davis Cup team.

Though Mrs. Moody first had to scramble to beat herself before she could beat Mrs. P. F. Glover, of England, 6—4, 7—5, the United States in general had a pretty good day. Out of 11 matches in which Americans took part, they won ten.

Besides Mrs. Moody, the only other Americans to play singles were Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass. Both won easily, Miss Bundy, from Joan Saunders, of England, 6—4, 6—2, and Mrs. Fabyan, from Miss G. M. Southwell, 6—1, 6—0, and now must meet each other in the fourth round.

Anderson Beaten.

The United States loss came when Owen Anderson, 18-year-old student at the University of California, at Los Angeles, through a slip in the program had to race from one doubles match to another. After pairing with English Rita Jarvis to beat Kho Sin Kie, of China, and Kay Stammers, of England, he went to the adjoining court, and, with Lawrence Nelson, of Los Angeles, lost to J. B. Sturgeon and G. L. Tuckett, 6—3, 9—7, 7—9, 6—0.

Central Europe, which by now is used to trouble, got more than its share. Max Ellmer, Swiss mountain-climber and Davis Cup player, beat Drago Mitic, of Yugoslavia, 3—6, 6—2, 7—5, 1—6, 6—2. Mitic, No. 6, on the seeded list, thus had the dubious distinction of being the first seeded player to go out.

Then C. M. "Jimmie" Jones, the abandoned British Davis Cupper, got a 5—2 lead on Roderich Menzel, of Czechoslovakia, in the final set, only to have Menzel pull it out of the fire, 6—3, 6—2, 4—6, 8—10, 7—5, after the hardest battle of the week.

Breaks Foe's Service.

The gigantic Menzel, the "Poet of Prague," pouring water over his bald head and tying iced handkerchiefs around his neck, came back with a magnificent spurt to break through Jones' service in the ninth and eleventh games and stay in the tournament.

Mitic had a bad day altogether, for he and Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France, seeded in mixed doubles, lost to A. D. Russell, of the Argentine, and Freda James, of England, 6—4, 6—4. That, however, ended the success of the South Americans, for United States Women's Champion Anita Lizana, of Chile, and her Brazilian partner, Procopio, were eliminated without a struggle by W. Tinkler and Margot Lumb, of England, 6—1, 6—1.

In the Americans' other matches, Budge and Gene Mako reached the third round of men's doubles; Budge and Alice Marble and Franz Kukuljevic, of Yugoslavia, and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, scored in mixed doubles; Miss Bundy and Helen Jacobs won their first women's doubles match, with Miss Jacobs showing no ill effects of her collapse two days ago, and Mrs. Andrus and Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, reached the third round of women's doubles.

Mrs. Glover, the former Nancy Lyle who played on the British Wightman Cup team, gave Mrs. Moody all she could stand for a while. At the start Helen simply couldn't keep the ball in the court and often was caught flat-footed on the baseline by Mrs. Glover's drop shots.

It is known, however, that Helen hates to play off the center court. Today she was on a side court, where the crowd was close to her. It seemed to affect her concentration, which is the strong point of her game.

In addition to Mrs. Moody's match tomorrow and Budge's encounter with Shayes, two other important singles tests will send Mako against H. W. (Bunny) Austin, seeded second, and Miss Jacobs against Miss James.

Picard Tops Goodall Play

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 24. — Henry Picard, the Hershey hurricane, stretched his head like a rubber band today as the 15 pro golfers in the $5,000 Goodall Invitation tourney steamed around to the fifty-fourth of the 126 holes they're to play at Kenwood.

After shooting a four-sub-par 67 in the morning round, Picard blazed out with a 68 in the afternoon for a total of 14 under par for the 54 holes. And, in the round-robin scoring, he moved from the seven-up lead he had yesterday to plus 10 after the morning round and a handsome plus 15½ for the 54.

Lawson Little, who duplicated Picard's 67 and 66, was second in the standings with plus 10. Horton Smith, who shot 69-69, and Jimmy Thomson, with 68-68, were third with plus 6 each.

Tony Penna also shot a 66 on the afternoon round after a par 71 in the morning and all those 66s equal the course's competitive records. Penna could have had a record 65 if he hadn't 3-putted the eighteenth.

Dodgers Trip Cards, 5 to 2

Fitzsimmons Hurls and Bats Club to Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, June 24.—Fat Freddy Fitzsimmons' big bat and pitching arm gave the Dodgers a 5-to-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in the opening game of their current series today.

Fitz drove in two runs with a double in the fourth and sent another across with a fly in the second. He allowed nine hits, but had to be relieved in the ninth when Pepper Martin and Don Gutteridge opened with consecutive doubles. Luke Hamlin finished the game without allowing further damage.

Roy Henshaw was charged with the defeat. He gave the Dodgers four of their runs, before being lifted for a pinch-hitter in the seventh.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New London, Conn., June 24.—Harvard's magnificent varsity crew, stroked by the redoubtable James (Spike) Chace, of New York City, capped the climax of an unbeaten naval campaign this evening on the crowded Thames River by administering a one-length beating to Yale in the 4-mile race featuring America's oldest intercollegiate sports spectacle.

Notwithstanding sustained and severe pressure from a rival boatload that likewise came up to the final test undefeated, the Crimson eight led from start to finish of the 4-mile upstream pull to achieve the third straight conquest for a Chace-stroked crew and give the Cantabs their first sweep of the regatta since 1916.

The Harvards simply had too much rowing "punch" for the Yales, at every critical stage of the long haul, as they topped off one of the greatest seasons in the Crimson's rowing history and touched off as wild a celebration as this old whaling town has witnessed in years.

The Harvard freshman eight administered a three-length drubbing to the Eli Yearlings while the Crimson "Jayvees" surprised with a one-length victory over their rivals in the two races rowed this morning, downstream, over the middle two miles of the historic Thames course.

50,000 See Races.

An estimated throng of 50,000 spectators, looking on from the shores, the observation train, and more than 1,200 assorted craft that gave the full length of the course a boom-time background, saw Harvard's navy complete its rout of the ancient foe in all classes of competition.

Crimson oarsmen, prior to today, had triumphed in competition for "house," "lightweight," or 150-pound and "combination" crews. The sweep for the Cambridge forces climaxed the two-year coaching regime of Long Tom Bolles, the former Washington oarsman. Simultaneously the triple setback for the Elis today marked the first time since Ed Leader took charge of the coaching at New Haven that Yale failed to win a single race on the Thames.

Plenty Powerful.

The big, powerful Harvard varsity didn't touch its own upstream record of 20:02, set last year. The victors, in fact, were a good five lengths off this time, despite ideal rowing conditions, as they crossed the finish line at Bartletts Cove in 20:20, compared with Yale's 20:23 4-5.

The Crimson sweep-swingers, however, had all the speed and power they needed, at every stage to stand off the challenges of a gritty Yale boatload that refused to admit defeat until the course finally ran out. The Elis rowed their hearts out in a gallant sequence of bids to overhaul their rivals, but they simply did not have the necessary drive.

The Harvard stroke ranged from 32-to-the-minute to a closing 38. It was always smooth, with no visible check, and there was always the added "punch" of Chace's pace-making to match everything the Elis offered.

Giants Beat Bruins, 5-3

Ott Hits 18th Home Run as Mates Win.

New York, June 24 (AP).—Mel Ott's eighteenth homer of the year and "Fireman" Dick Coffman's third relief pitching job in as many days saved the Giants' game-and-a-half National League lead today.

Between them they took the tricks that gave Terrible Terry's Terriers a 5-to-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs in the first game of the current series.

Coffman was hurried into the contest in the eighth, when Cliff Melton, who had relieved Clyde Castleman in the third, began to come apart. Carl Reynolds had just parked one of Cliff's curves against the upper left-field stands for his third homer to tie the count, and Bill Jurges and Tony Lazzeri had singled.

But Fireman Dick put out the fire by forcing Billy Herman to foul out. Then he breezed through the Cubs in the ninth to take credit for the win, his fourth of the season against one setback.

With the second-place Cincinnati Reds winning today in Philadelphia, the victory came in mighty handy to the New Yorkers.

They appeared to have the game well in hand when they clubbed Bill Lee, the Cubs' starter, to the showers under a five-hit, three-run barrage in the very first inning. But Tex Carleton came in and blanked them from there on to the eighth, while the Cubs pecked away at Castleman and Melton to finally tie the score, just before Ott broke up the game.

LOCKER ROOM LANGUAGE.

New York, June 24.—With the big fight out of the way and Joe Louis firmly established as the rightful occupant of the heavyweight throne and me with at least an even break over the course of a couple of years, it's nice to go back to the locker room and listen to the talk that flows back and forth. So naturally, I did.

VIDMER.

"Did you see about that fellow who had a hole in one the other day and yet lost the hole? Yeah, that's right. Well, here's how it happened—it was hot and both golfers were pretty tired and one of them was just about beaten when the other one stepped up to hit his tee shot on a par-3 hole. He laid it pretty close to the pin and the other one said:

"'Hit one for me.'

"So he hit one for the other fellow and they walked on down to the green, but only one ball was in sight.

"'Too bad, pal,' said the fellow who had hit both shots. 'This is my ball, yours must have gone over.' Well the other fellow said that was all right; he had told his opponent to hit his ball and he would play it wherever it went. They looked a while and then found the second ball in the cup!"

"Say, who would get credit for the hole in one in that case anyway?"

"I doubt if there's any rule covering it. Just like a match I was playing down in Florida with a guy who was having a lot of trouble. But finally he really hit one—only it hooked up against a palmetto tree and bounced right back toward the tee. As it sailed by, on the rebound, this fellow took a swing at it with his club and hit it about a hundred yards down the fairway. Then he turned to me and with his eyes wide with excitement—it was the first time he had been on the fairway all day—he asked:

"'Say! what's the rule on that, anyway?'"

Overdone Etiquette.

"That reminds me of the time I was playing with two guys in St. Louis. It was August and you know how hot it can get out there even in the early spring or late fall. Well, none of us were doing any too well, but this fellow—Bill, his name was—was having most of the trouble and he was about to explode. In fact, nobody dared say a word, because Bill was storing up a lo of expletives and the smallest remark might set him off.

"But finally we came to about the fifteenth hole and he still was under control. Well, I drove first and then Bill stepped up to the ball and hit it a tremendous lick. The first real shot he had hit all day. Only there was a tree in the line of flight. That's all that was the matter with it. And it hit the tree and bounced straight back into trap that was about 50 yards behind the tee where we were standing.

"Still, Bill held in. He didn't say a word. Then the third fellow teed up and started to drive, but just so he wouldn't offend Bill, he stepped back from his ball and said:

"'Wait a minute. I don't know what the rule is on this. Should I drive, or are you still away, Bill? ' Then it came!"

Human Hazard.

"Yeah, I know how sore he probably got. Things like that make you explode sometimes. But the worst thing that ever happened to me was a caddie who had the hiccups. Did you ever have a caddie with the hiccups? Well, let me tell you there's nothing worse that can happen to you on a golf course. You take your stance and start your backswing and just when you're at the top of it—there it is. And even if it doesn't come, it's just as bad because the minute you reach the top of your backswing, you're expecting it. A caddie with the hiccups can lick you either way, whether he does or he doesn't."

"Oh, you ought not let a little thing like that bother you. I was out taking a lesson from the pro at our club the other day and you should have heard him. It was one continuous monologue. He would start every time I teed up a ball.

Valuable Lesson.

"'Now be sure your hands are right. Don't get that right hand too far on top of the club. Now a nice soft grip. Soft, that's it. And when you come back bring it back slowly. Don't hurry that back swing. You can't hit a ball going back, no matter how fast you swing the club. Take it easy. That's it, now pivot—don't forget to pivot—get those shoulders around. Now! Now! Come on from the inside—inside! Inside!'

"And all the time he was talking I was trying to hit the ball. Well, it kept up all afternoon. Three hours I was out there hitting practice shots and he never stopped talking and telling me what to do for a second. Strange as it may seem, I was hitting the ball pretty well when we got through, though, and when I finally, quit, he said:

"'Well, did you learn anything this afternoon?'

"And I said sure. I had learned one thing that was invaluable and that undoubtedly would help me the rest of my life.

"'What's that?'" he asked.

"'Never again,' I said, 'will I be distracted by somebody talking while I'm trying to hit the ball.'"

Baltimorean Blasts Par By 2 Shots

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Rodgers Forge, Md., June 24.—It was just another round of golf here today for 18-year-old Otto Greiner, recent sensation of the Middle Atlantic golfing world, who continued his marvelous sub-par streak with a 68 over the Rodgers Forge course, two under par, and the medal winning score in the eighteenth renewal of the Maryland State amateur championship.

Greiner, Baltimore University student and a member of the host course, won the Maryland Intercollegiate title in May. Last week he won the medal and the championship of the Middle Atlantic Amateur Golf Association, and Thursday he played 36 holes in four under par to win the Maryland Junior title.

Greiner Out in 33.

Out in 33, with birdies on the third, fourth and eighth holes and a bogey on seventh, Greiner returned in 35, even par, scoring a birdie to clinch the medal honors, his fourth prize in alittle over a week of golf.

Trailing by a two stroke margin with an even par score of 70 was the methodical Spencer Overton, former champion, who wasted three strokes with par on the back nine after an outgoing 32, three under regulation figures.

Burnett was out in 36 one over par, and back in 38 while Sharke after starting with a two over par was out in 38 and back in 34 for his 72. Brownell was 37 out and 38 back for a five over par score.

Other D. C. Scores.

Scores of other District golfers included Maury Fitzgerald, Kenwood, 78; Forest Thompson, Beaver Dam, 83; C. H. Cohen, Capital, 84; George Borsari, of the same course, 87; Charles Canny, Indian Spring, 91 and Fred Mott, Beaver Dam, who failed to turn in a card.

Sharkey's 72 was the third lowest score while Charles Shaw, Hillendale, had 73 and Ed Steinhert Rodgers Force and Tom Carrick, Mt. Pleasant, matched Burnett's 74.

The lone major casualty in the qualifying round was Ernie Caldwell, long a prominent figure in the State tournament, whose 78 was a stroke over the qualifying limit. Scores of 77 and under made the grade in the championship flight.

Greiner's round, although expected after his fine golf of late, makes him an overwhelming favorite to succeed Burnett as titleholder. In the first round tomorrow morning, Burnett meets Steinhart at 10 o'clock. Brownell faces Overton in the feature encounter at 10:15, while Sharkey opposes Carrick 5 minutes later. Greiner's initial opponent is Charles French, Annapolis, who made the first flight with a 77.

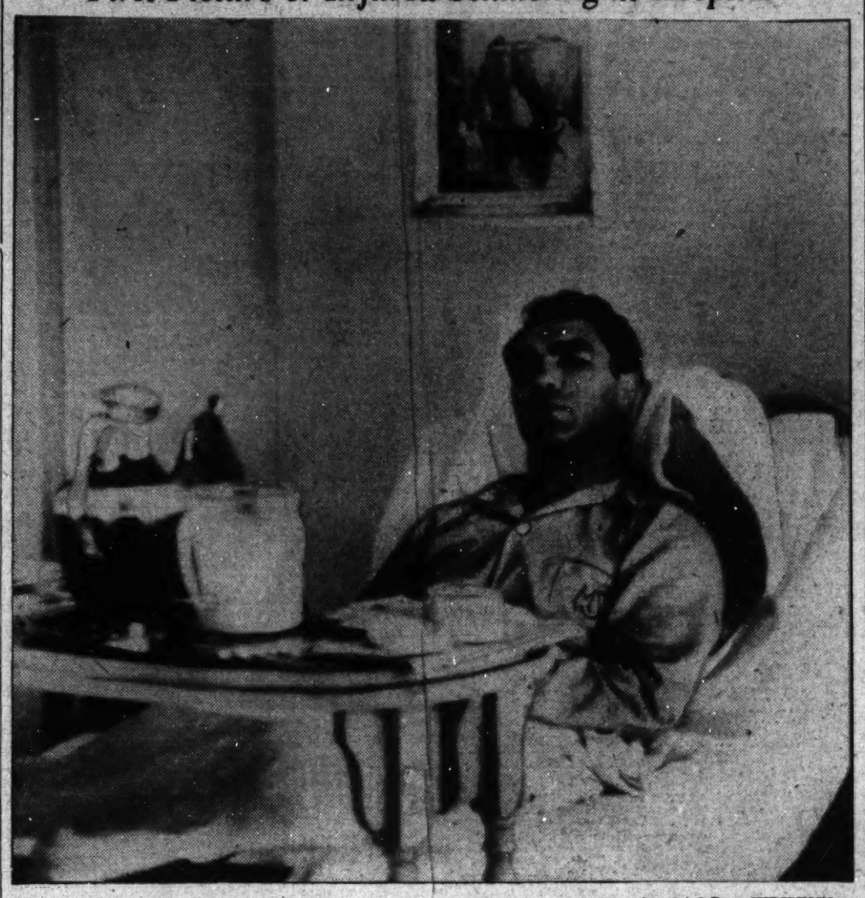
First Picture of Injured Schmeling in Hospital



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Willard Wins Golf Tourney

A. D. (Jess) Willard, jr., general manager of radio station WJSV, carried home a couple of wedding anniversary surprises to the little lady last night after winning two prizes in the annual Advertising Club golf tournament at Kenwood.

Wielding a potent cluster of irons against an ambitious field of prospective Guldahls, Willard captured the Morris Plan Bank Trophy for low gross, then won a handsome bouquet of flowers, presented by Schaeffer Bros., when the auditing committee discovered his card for the first nine holes was the lowest of the field.

But Willard was not the lone prize-winner. E. R. Hotz, Times-Herald, won the Kal Advertising Plaque and Cup for low net, gaining a leg on the three-legged cup. David D. Stein, of Kal, came home with a handsome wrist watch, the gift of Ross Jewelery Co., for second low net, and Alvin Q. Erlich, president of the club, and Regis O'Donnell, Post representative, tied for third.

O'Donnell won the third award, a set of golf clubs, by the simple procedure of tossing a coin.

Low gross prize, Class A, went to W. Frank Gatewood, while Mac Sherman carried off the Class B honors. Tom Griffin bagged the low net prize for guests, second place going to M. A. Weiss, and third to Ross Smith. Low gross guest prize was won by E. B. Heimer.

H. A. Shubin's score (total unannounced) was high for 18 holes and good for a prize and William J. Anof won similar honors over a nine-hole route. Cards of all prize-winners and nonfinishers were judiciously omitted by Charles J. Columbus, club secretary, who covered the affair.

The committee in charge of the program, which culminated in a dinner, was headed by W. Frank Gatewood, assisted by Alvin Q. Erlich, A. D. Willard, jr., E. R. Hotz, Louis D. Krakow, J. B. Burris, James R. Golden, Don M. Bernard and Howard Parrish.

Red Tops Capture Tilt.

With C. Currin pitching 3-hit ball and only issuing three passes, the Red Tops baseball team nosed out the Y. M. C. A. Flashes, 5-4 yesterday. After Sid Cunin tripled with one man on to tie the score, Buster Michael singled home Cunin with the winning run.

Police No. 10 Wins.

Max Shows Improvement; Plans Pushed for Louis-Baer Fight

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 24.—As Mex Schmeling showed distinct improvement from his back injury, Promoter Mike Jacobs today went ahead with plans to match heavyweight champion Joe Louis against Max Baer in September, probably in New York.

Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, has a date with Promoter Jacobs tomorrow, at which time he expects to sign a three-year contract giving Jacobs exclusive control of Baer's ring activities. New York was favored for the fight, although a delegation from San Francisco spent an hour in a huddle with Jacobs, trying to get the championship tilt for the San Francisco exposition some time in 1939.

At the same time a bid came in the form of a cable from London and guaranteed Louis "$200,000 in American currency or the privilege of 40 per cent of the gate" for a late September meeting with Tommy Farr, British Empire champion whom the Brown Bomber outpointed last year. The offer came from Armand Vincent, former Montreal promoter now in London.

Could Seat 100,000.

Armand would stage the fight at Wembley Stadium, which has a seating capacity of 100,000. He also promised to cut Jacobs in on the promotion end.

Jacobs, himself, was a bit mysterious about the matter, but said he would issue an announcement tomorrow dealing with the heavyweight division. All along, Mike has said he intended pitting Baer against the Schmeling-Louis winner if he could gain control of Baer's services for an extended period.

While there has been some skepticism whether Louis would fight again in 1938 because a substantial part of his purse would have to be turned over to the Government in view of his big earnings so far this year, both the champion and his managers said he would be glad to meet Baer or any other contender chosen by Jacobs when asked to do so by Jacobs.

Schmeling spent a comfortable day in the Polyclinic Hospital although his manager, Joe Jacobs, suffered a case of high blood pressure until an X-ray picture of Schmeling's injury was released by the hospital. Joe wanted the plate to prove to a handful of experts who had some doubts as to whether Schmeling actually was injured. Finally, promoter Jacobs, accompanied by an attorney, went to the hospital and returned with the X-ray plate.

Official Statement.

Schmeling, for the first time, was allowed to receive visitors. Promotor Jacobs spent an hour with the stricken fighter and, during the day, Dr. Hans Dieckhoff, German ambassador to the United States, also paid his respects.

Max Macon, trainer and confidant of Schmeling's, said the Teuton still is anxious to get a return match with Louis.

"Machon said physicians at the hospital told him no man in the world could stand up under the blow to the kidney area as suffered by Schmeling.

"There is a small unprotected area there," said Machon, pointing to the X-ray plate, "which seems to be alive. Chances are Schmeling wouldn't be hit there again in a hundred years. We don't blame Louis. He was just in there firing away. I never once claimed foul, and if Max said anything about a foul it was because he was addled and didn't know what he was saying."

Former Heavyweight Champion Gene Tuney was the spokesman for the San Francisco delegation, which included Charles M. Traung, San Francisco police commissioner; Jim Howell, of the California Fair commission, and Robert Taylor, the movie star who all the tough guys around the Hippidrome later voted as "a regular he-man guy."

Welsh Rules Favorite in Net Tourney

Few Visitors in District Men's Singles Opening Today at Columbia.

By Jack Munhall.

The ominous ever-present shadow of Barney Welsh, who has dominated local tennis tournaments with discouraging consistency for the past few years, completely shrouds other entries as the District Men's Open event gets under way today at Columbia Country Club.

His superiority over all other players clearly established, Welsh last night assumed the role of prohibitive favorite when the entry list was closed minus the name of a single outstanding non-local contender.

Although there are three District players, namely, Hugh Lynch, Bill Breese and Dolly Mitchell, who conceivably could upset the Rockville Rambler, it was to some outstanding outsider that observers looked for a threat to Welsh's supremacy.

Bill Rida, of Norfolk stands out among the invading players because of his recent defeat of Mitchell in the Hotchkiss Cup play. Two other possible troublemakers are Hubert Simmons, of Harrisburg, and Frank Serany, of Hazelton, Pa.

But if any one is to halt Welsh's marc to his fifth straight city title it will be Lynch, winner of the Star tournament and for many years Welsh's chief local rival. Lynch in trimming Lieut. James Farrin in the final of the Star play showed perhaps the most impressive form of his career and now appears at the peak of his game.

He is covering the court like a blanket and volleying with deadly accuracy. His backhand, which has been the weak link in his game, has shown distinct improvement while his forehand drives have been powerful and well-placed. Then, too, Lynch is the only man to defeat Welsh here in three years.

Other District players who may crash through to a surprise title are Davie Johnsen, District junior titleholder, who is improving with amazing rapidity; Tony Latona, always a threat, and Lieuts. Bill Howard and James Farrin.

In all there are 83 entries for the singles. Doubles entries close at noon tomorrow. Announcement of the start of the doubles will be made later.

The pairings:

First Round (Singles), at 2 O'clock.

Nats to Rely On DeShong In First Tilt

Pitcher Will Earn $25 by Victory, Harris Intimates.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, June 24.—James Brooklyn DeShong, the American League's best-dressed pitcher, will attempt to do $25 worth of pitching for the Nats tomorrow against the St. Louis Browns.

If he turns in an impressive victory over the St. Louis club in the series opener, then DeShong will be $25 richer than his present estate. At least that is what Manager Bucky Harris has intimated to the Nats' righthander who goes in for ice cream shades in both his summer and winter wear.

DeShong last week postponed the purchase of a lavendar ensemble that had captured his fancy in a Detroit show window. It would have virtually completed his summer wardrobe, but a crimp was put in his ambitions when he was tagged with a $25 fine that afternoon by Manager Harris for failing to carry out Harris' orders to bunt against the Tigers.

But DeShong may still possess the outfit, the sight of which left him quite enraptured. Harris, no vindictive type of fellow, very probably will remit the fine if DeShong pitches one of his good games tomorrow and starts the Nats off with a victory in the three-game series.

Opposing DeShong will be either Oral Hildebrand whose won and lost record this season is a gross libel on effectiveness, or Van Atta, who has lost four games without winning one this season. Hildebrand has been the most consistent pitcher on the Browns' staff, but his every appearance on the hill has been a magical signal for the Browns to stop hitting.

For the first time since the Nats started spring trainings on February 28, Manager Bucky Harris has no outfield problem on his hands. Even with Johnny Stone, the star of the 1937 outfield trio, convalescing in Washington, the Nats' outfield is a source of satisfaction to Harris.

Finally, the Nats' manager has found the right combination. With George Case in rightfield, Sammy West in center and Al Simmons in left, Harris has been getting smashing results.

Case, on a prolonged hitting spree, has finally learned to field and is rapidly winning distinction as the most valuable player on the club. West, with his hitting, is a decided improvement over Almada, and Simons, again a powerhouse at the plate, is a fixture.

Harris no longer has to juggle and shift his outfield against different types of pitching. The trio of Case, West and Simmons is in there to stay. Goose Goslin and Taft Wright are definitely relegated to the bench.

The Nats have been no sensations on their current road trip, having won only half of the ten games they have played since leaving Griffith Stadium, but comparatively they have been an amazing success.

Already they have two more victories to show for their efforts than they had at the end of their last road trip of 12 games. And here in St. Louis they expect to make a clean sweep of the three-game series.

Harris is buoyed, too, by the recent performances of a pair of his pitchers—Harry Kelley and Dutch Leonard, who turned in shut-out triumphs over the White Sox.

The lone sour note of the Nats' road excursion has been the abysmal failure of Wes Ferrell.

Bashful Buck Newsom was a visitor at the Nats' hotel today and unblushingly warned the Washington athletes that he would probably shut them out when he pitches one of the games of the double-header on Sunday.

Hal Trosky's Two-Bagger Beats Bosox

Hit Scores 3 Runs in 7th to Give Leaders a 7-6 Decision.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 24.—The Cleveland Indians' pennant fever fight downed Boston, 7 to 6, today and pulled the Tribe four and a half games ahead of both Boston and the New York Yankees, who lost at Detroit.

The Tribe fought up from behind and won the first of a three-game series off Archie McKain when Hal Trosky's seventh-inning two-bagger brought home Lary, Campbell and Averill.

McKain, in the third, replaced Jim Bagby, jr., who made his first start in the park where his famous father hurled 30 wins for Cleveland back in 1920. Bagby was nicked for two runs in the second and wal[illegible] one batter and gave another two balls in the third.

Although Johnny Humphries, Cleveland rookie, held Boston to only six blows, they came when they counted most. The Red Sox's head start came in the first inning when two hits and two errors produced three runs, two of them scoring on Manager Joe Cronin's single through the box.

Eight doubles were chalked up in the slam-bang encounter, Ken Keltner, of Cleveland, hit his twelfth home run of the season. Cleveland made 11 hits.

Sandlot Pick-ups

Sherrard Robertson, nephew of the boss of the Nats-Clark Griffith, and Maryland University athlete, who has been playing bang up ball for the District Plumbers, is leaving the local sandlots as the Charlotte (N. C.) team is waiting for his services . . . Tommy Jones and Harry Jenkins, of sandlot fame, have returned from Augusta, Ga., and Spartansburg, N. C. . . . Both boys were attempting to make professional ball playing a career.

Tillie Scott, who slammed the homer with two mates aboard to hand O'Donnells Sea Grill nine its first set back of the season, was considered one of the best athletes ever to attend a Prince Georges County high school . . . He now cavorts for the National Savings crew, of the Industrial League . . . While at Mount Rainier High, he starred in soccer, baseball, basketball and track . . . If he had been fortunate to remain at the University of Maryland, his basketball prowess would have been compared with that of the All-American Louis Bozie Berger, according to Coach Burt Shipley, basketball mentor at the Terp institution.

The Post carried the following information a week ago but upon request it is again reprinted . . . The yellow baseball used in the Federal Bureau of Investigation-Pepco game played at Griffith Stadium recently, as a part of the Shriners' Day celebration, has been used by college nines and also tried out in the big leagues . . . Columbia and Pennsylvania found the ball satisfactory . . . The attitude of the big leagues is not definitely known . . . It was designed by a safety engineer and has red seams . . . The knowledge factories, which have used the new color pellet, claim that it is easier for the batter to see and spectators to follow . . . When it is considered that yellow is used universally as safety markers on streets and highways of the Nation, the argument sounds logical.

Jockey Root Pilots Her Home, Beating Lead Please 2 Lengths.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 24.—The green and white colors of Melvin C. Hazen, District Commissioner, were borne to victory by Mary Allen, a 3-year-old filly, in the Doddridge Purse, outstanding event on the Friday program here in the mountain country. Carrying wads of Washington money, Mary Allen answered Jockey Buddy Root's drive to take the lead in the stretch and defeat H. C. Wilt's Lead Please by two lengths. Another length away came Mrs. D. T. Doerner's Shot and Shell to be third in the limit field of eight operating over the 6½-furlong route.

Mary Allen was installed the favorite and supplied a $5.60 pay-off for those in the crowd of 6,000 who invested in her chances. She stepped the distance over a fast track and under smiling skies in the good time of 1:21 2-5.

The winning filly was not prominent during the early stages. She was far back while Lead Please set the pace, accompanied by Landsman. Along the back stretch Root hustled her and she gained some ground while racing on the inside. On the swing to the stretch, Landsman stopped and Root sent Mary Allen up on the inside. The filly drove through and took the lead. Jockey Berg kept Lead Please going, but she was unable to do anything about it. Shot and Shell, in trouble several times, closed with a rush to nip Topsie H out of third money.

J. Fred Adams' Feather Tread, shipped here early in the week from Delaware Park, won at the first asking in the opening event, the filly stepping home ahead of seven other juveniles to pay an $18.20 mutuel. Prince Jock was second and Home Hunter third. Jockey W. L. Smith, also a newcomer hereabouts, piloted the winner.

Six O'clock, owned by S. L. Stewart and ridden by Leon Garrett, accounted for the second purse, scoring a length triumph over Janstar. Voodooism came from far back to be third. The winner was a $4 favorite.

Favorite players cashed again in the third race. Anya, owned by H. P. Dulaney, jr., and excellently handled by Jockey Beverly Hacker, turned back seven others and paid $5.60. She got up in the concluding strides to down Gold Streak by a head margin. Timepiece was third.

U. S. Steel Corp. Reduces Prices To Spur Trade

Two Large Units Cut Quotations Down to Pre-1928 Level.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, June 24 (AP).—Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation announced today a reduction in prices effective immediately f. o. b. Pittsburgh and Chicago. The new prices are approximately those in effect prior to 1928.

"The reductions are made to meet competitive conditions and with the hope that such reductions will stimulate a demand for steel products," the company announced.

Under the new schedule of prices which the company said was a substantial cut—the price for rerolling billets, blooms and slabs per gross ton at Pittsburgh was set at $34.50 and $34.60 at Chicago; sheet bars per gross ton at Pittsburgh, $34.50 and at Chicago $34.60; forging blooms, billets and slabs per gross ton at Pittsburgh $40.50 and at Chicago $40.60.

New Prices.

The reductions ranged from $3 to $4 a ton. The higher reductions were on hot rolled carbon steel bars, alloy bars and billets and sheet piling. Chicago got a "break" in the price readjustment. The corporation announced all prices were identical at the mills in both cities, excepting for a 10 cent yard shifting difference. It credited the revision to increased facilities and greater diversification of products in the Chicago area.

Hot rolled carbon steel bars formerly were $1 a ton more in Chicago, hot rolled steel strip $2 higher, as were hot rolled sheets, concrete reinforcing bars, cold rolled sheets and sheet piling.

Wages Not Affected.

The steel corporation informally said that the price reductions had no connection with the question of wages and added that anything affecting them would have to be taken up with the steel workers organizing committee, a C. I. O. affiliate.

An idea of the extent of the reduction was shown in present and previous prices for hot-rolled strip and hot-rolled sheet. The old price of strip, at Pittsburgh, was $2.32 a hundred pounds, and the new price is $2.17 a hundredweight. For hot-rolled sheet the same price change was made.

T. C. I. Reductions.

Birmingham, June 24 (AP).—Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., U. S. Steel subsidiary, announced today a price reduction, effective immediately, on Birmingham carload lots of various grades of steel. The decreases announced at Birmingham were proportionately in line with the cuts announced simultaneously in Pittsburgh by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, another U. S. Steel unit.

Hotel Income Up 7.25% Wages Increase 12%

New York, June 24.—According to "Trends in the Hotel Business," annual statistical review of 250 hotels in 100 cities, just published by Harris, Kerr, Forster & Co., accountants and auditors, hotel income increased in 1937 over 1936 by 7.25 per cent, but wage costs in hotels increased 12 per cent. Employes received 31.17 per cent of the total income without considering cost of meals, social security and unemployment taxes.

Rains Prevent Further Rise in Wheat Prices

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 24.—Beneficial rains in spring crop areas both sides of the Canadian boundary served to offset in Chicago wheat dealings today any material stimulus from securities.

As a result of timely moisture northwest, Minneapolis wheat values tumbled as much as 2½ cents at one stage, but downturns here were only fractional. On the other hand, gains in Chicago proved to be of but similar limited extent.

Because of conflict of influences, the outcome for the Chicago market was virtually a drawn battle after many nervous fluctuations in a range of about 1 cent, with prices averaging a bit lower most of the time, but rallying near the last on account of news of unwanted wet weather in harvest districts southwest and owing also to United States export business totaling about 500,000 bushels.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ⅛ higher compared with yesterday's finish, July 75½-75¾, Sept. 76⅝-76¾, corn unchanged to ¼ up, July 57½-57⅝, Sept. 58⅞-59, oats unchanged to ⅛ advance, rye showing ¾-¾ bulge, and provisions varying from 2 cents drop to 5 cents gain.

Gold Imports Drop to $6,057,601 in Week

The Commerce Department said yesterday $6,057,601 worth of gold was sold the United States in the week ended June 17. In spite of a strong demand for the metal in the London market in the same period.

The amount, however, was only a fifth of the previous week's total and about a half of receipts during previous weeks in June and May. Shipments included $1,763,509 from England and $2,663,713 from Australia.

The Market

Profit-Taking Sales Fail to Check Vigorous Rise of Stocks, Now in Its Fifth Day.

New York, June 24.—Another broad market in stocks lifted quotations today for the fifth consecutive session, reinforcing the notion that more than a speculative whirl may possibly be behind the sustained movement. The advance flagged late in the day on profit-taking by a few traders, but such sales were absorbed readily and levels held close to the best figures of the upswing. Brokers again reported orders pouring in from all parts of the country at the start. The impending week-end slowed things down toward the finish.

The financial community was inclined toward a sober review of the market after the pronounced improvement. Although the ticker ran four minutes late while early orders were being filled, it tended to idle toward the end. In some cases the decision was to lighten commitments pending the fireside chat of tonight, for all presidential declarations occasion nervousness these days.

There were few significant items of news during the session to influence levels, as the announcement on steel price reductions came after the close. That incident is likely to have sweeping repercussions, and it was debated long and earnestly in brokerage rooms by tardy habitues. The intimate relationship of steel prices and wages promises a reopening of the broad problem of labor compensation, and probably further stimulation of the political debate on the subject.

Steel Cut Results.

Financial opinion differed late today as to the immediate results of the steel price cut, but in most quarters a sigh of relief was heaved over the inevitable reopening of the matter. Steelmakers long have maintained that no appreciable increase of inquiry is apt to follow such a change, and many of them doubtless would have preferred continuance of the old scales, but political considerations intervene here, as everywhere, with monopoly inquiries pending and charges of all sorts filling the air. The stock market reaction to the price change will prove interesting.

Trades proved more discriminating in their purchases during the session today. The eight utility stocks included in the Herald Tribune average compilation moved fractionally lower and it was easy to trace this hesitation to Government competition and fears of another blast against the power and light industry, but all other important groups of equities showed further gains

Some Advances 6 Points.

Advances ranged from fractions to 6 points, with the more conspicuous gains scarcer than in the preceding sessions of the week. Industrials generally forged ahead, however, with steel and equipment shares the favorites. Copper and other base metal stocks swung ahead, as the price of scrap copper was advanced and lead moved up another peg. Rails joined in the trend despite the appearance of another series of poor earnings reports.

The 100-stock average tabulation moved to a high of 100.82, or the best figure since March 4, last, and closed at 100.21 up 0.52 for the day. Due to late sluggishness, the volume on the big board dropped to 2,290,540 shares, as against 2,403,270 on Thursday. Total volume for the five sessions of the week is 8,950,940 shares, which is the best weekly figure since the last week of October, 1937, with tomorrow's trading still to come.

Foreign exchange markets contributed little to the discussion of the market, and influenced it not at all. Talk of dollar devaluation died away almost entirely, although the possibility of action remained in the minds of all traders. The frequent denials of currency manipulative intentions invariably are gauged with assertions of a 24-hour basis in mind, and the uncertainty can be overcome only by a flat, out-and-out stabilization.

Rail Bonds Again Lead

Most speculative bonds again advanced in the listed market today, but there were signs that the movement was flagging. Selling orders came nearer to matching the buying, and in some instances profit-taking developed. The bulk of issues still moved upward, however, and railroad bonds again led the advance. United States Treasury issues dropped sharply as funds were turned into speculative channels. Foreign dollar securities were quiet and irregular. Turnover was $8,130,000, against $10,770,000 in the previous session.

The downward drift of Treasury issues began to attract a good deal of attention, for the movement has continued throughout three sessions. Cautiousness in investment policies of larger institutional investors, pending determination of the speculative bulge, contributed to the decline. But small sales by holders who wished to take a flyer in the stock market probably supplied the initial impetus. Declines today ranged from 1-32 to 12-32 point, in long Treasury bonds. Guaranteed issues of the Farm and Home Corporations were relatively steady. In counter trading small recessions appeared in Treasury notes and discount bills.

Profit-Taking.

Speculative railroad bonds were churned about, with initial gains large, but profit-taking developed as the session progressed and cut the advances to more modest proportions. Quite a few bonds finished with gains of a point or two, but movement otherwise were fractional, with recessions sprinkled liberally among the plus signs. Local tractions moved off, and international telephone bonds also lost ground. Convertibles lost ground in some cases, but commodity issues did well. Highest grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds were soft under the influence of the treasury-issue decline.

Cuban public works bonds were active on the announcement that the refunding 4½s are ready, but the issue closed unchanged. Other default bonds in the foreign list were quiet and irregular. Japanese issues were soft and Italians firm, while Czech 8s held to previous figures. Highest trade foreign bonds were steady on the usual demand from London.

Export Copper, Lead and Zinc Again Advance

Steel Scrap at $12-$12.50 Is an Increase of $2 in Ten Days.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 24.—Fresh price advances in leading non-ferrous metals, including lead, zinc, copper and steel scrap were posted by sellers today in the wake of continued heavy demand both at home and abroad.

American Smelting & Refining Co. increased lead $3 a ton to a basis of 4½ cents a pound, New York, the highest since February 10. Other producers followed the markup.

Sellers of zinc posted new quotations of 4½ cents a pound, up .10 of a cent a pound from the previous day and at the highest level since last March 9. Sales of this metal were said to be extremely heavy yesterday in all centers.

Custom smelters raised the price of scrap copper ¼ cent a pound to 7½ cents and export copper, strong the past several weeks, gained new ground abroad with sales reported in good volume at 9.35 cents. The domestic price of electrolytic metal remained at 9 cents. Copper futures also advanced.

Meanwhile, Dow Jones & Co. reported in a dispatch from Pittsburgh that dealers quotations on number one heavy melting steel scrap had been advanced 50 cents a ton to $12-$12.50, a new high on the current upward movement. The new quotation, the dispatch said, brought the net gain for this metal to $2 a ton during the past 10 days.

2 Investment Trusts Barred From Selling

The Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that the United States District Court at Philadelphia had enjoined Capital Savings Plan, Inc., and its wholly-owned subsidiary, Independence Shares Corporation, from selling securities in violation of the securities act.

The commission complained that Capital Savings Plan, through its 500 or more salesmen in Pennsylvania had sold securities, called "Capital Savings Plan Contract Certificates," which are participations in an investment trust upon an investment trust, with two sets of fees and charges. The commission charged that these fees and charges were not adequately disclosed or explained to the purchasers.

Investment Dealers Form Commodity Group

New York, June 24.—Following a luncheon forum on commodity markets conducted by Commodity Corporation attended by more than 100 investment dealers from all parts of the country, plans were laid for the formation of Commodity Distributors, Inc., a nationwide security distributing organization, according to announcement made today by Hal F. Lee, who will be president of the new organization.

Described as a "co-operative distributing group," Commodity Distributors, Inc., will serve as selling agency for the shares of Commodity Corporation, a commodity investment trust designed to offer the investor the opportunity to invest in a cross-section of basic commodities.

Slow-Motion Pictures Reveal German Battler's Impotency

By Lewis F. Atchison.

If a kidney punch finished Max Schmeling in his bout with Joe Louis the other night, the title-holder wasted a lot of time and right-hands on the Dutchman's be-whiskered chin, or so it seems from motion pictures of the affair.

Promoter Henry Hiser is currently putting the boys through their paces at his State Theater, Bethesda, and the view afforded through camera lens is much better than the one from the $30 ring-side chairs—and some $29.75 cheaper.

Better than being at the actual fight is the slow-motion account of the knockout, which reveals the kidney punch was not the first, but one of the in-between grenades exploded on Schmeling's mid-riff. And, as more than one blow landed in this part of the anatomy, it is difficult to ascertain exactly which did the damage.

The strictly neutral camera reveals Schmeling's unbelievable impotency in bold relief as he paws feebly at Louis' ribs and body from the inside. His gloved right hand sweeps around as mildly as the friendly wag of a puppy's tail. It certainly couldn't have bothered Louis, and must have given him a clew to the German's inability to cope with him.

Schmeling was pinned on the ropes by his conqueror, after taking a series of jarring left hooks and right crosses to the head. The film shows how he clung to the upper strand with one hand, evidently trying to pull himself out of harm's way. When he failed he turned almost completely around, defense completely gone, and swayed gently with his head halfway out of the ring. Referee Arthur Donovan caught Louis' left hand as he started another sweeping hook, temporarily saving the invader from being knocked out there.

Donovan saved Schmeling again, temporarily, after the second knockdown, jumping in between the men and shoving Louis away, but when Max came up again he was a dead duck for certain. Louis cracked him with hard right hands that spun his head halfway around. After seeing the number and caliber of right hands to the head Schmeling absorbed, it's a wonder he lasted as long as he did.

Looking at the film leaves you with the impression that Max was not paralyzed by a blow, but badly stunned or shocked, and as helpless as any other fighter in the same predicament. He merely took a bigger bite than his pugilistic digestive machinery could handle. Take our word for it, or, have a gander at the film and see for yourself.

Abram Loses Weight Fight

George Abrams lost the second decision of his youthful ring career yesterday when the District Boxing Commission ruled that he must weigh in again Monday for his bout with Phil Furr at the stadium.

The decision culminated a brief bit of wrangling over a matter of two pounds — but two precious pounds in the rival camps' collective eyes. Chris Dundee, Furr's pilot, asserted that at 158 pounds his man will make mince-meat of the Washington lad, but would have trouble with him at 160.

Abrams' stand is that he made the stipulated weight on the date originally agreed on for the bout, which was postponed one week because of rain, and should not be required to make it again. Going through the process of again shedding advoirdupois may weaken him this time.

In handing down its verdict, the commission pointed to a clause in his contract in which Abrams agreed to make 158 pounds "by 2 p. m. on the day of the said contest." While there is nothing in the rule book covering such matters, the ring body decreed that in this instance the contract itself is the governing instrument.

Furr, meanwhile, is hard at work in New York, working at Stillman's gymnasium with Tony Ciaccio, who actually whipped Abrams here a few months ago, but lost the decision on fouls. A week's delay has meant much to Furr, who was favoring a fractured wrist, and should have him at his peak for the bout. Normally a welterweight, Furr is stepping out of his class for this fight, which will be for the city middleweight championship.

The remainder of the card announced for last Monday has been left over intact, with the El Brockman—Joey Spangler six-rounder rated as the other outstanding attraction.

Outfielder Bob Seeds Is Purchased by Giants

New York, June 24 (AP).—The New York Giants today purchased outfielder Bob Seeds from the Newark Club of the International League, a Yankee "farm." The deal was a straight cash transaction with no purchase price announced.

This season Seeds has hit .333 for 58 games, including 28 home runs and 93 runs batted in to lead the league in both divisions.

He has seen previous major league service with the Yankees, Boston Red Sox, Cleveland Indians and Chicago White Sox.

Mrs. M. A. Miller won top honors with a low net score of 76 in the medal play golf tournament held at the Kenwood Country Club yesterday. Mrs. Carl Underwood and Mrs. H. H. Hughes were tied for the runner up position with scores of 82.

Kleins Play Today.

The Klein Tavern baseball team will play the Anacostia Motor nine today at 5 p. m., on the No. 1 Fairlawn field. Manager Smitty Nau requests all players to be on the diamond at 4:30 p. m.

Baltimore Giants Play Here Today

The Baltimore Elite Giants, former Washington representatives, will return to Griffith Stadium to meet the Washington Black Senators today at 3 p. m. in a National Negro League tilt. Bob Griffith will toe the mound for the Elites. He will be opposed by Specs Roberts.

Foots West, sensational first sacker, and Bizz Mackey, rated by Ty Cobb as one of the greatest catchers in the game, will be on hand to thrill the fans with long distance clouting and spectacular fielding. And the Negro nine play a fast brand of ball, as 4,000 spectators who witnessed last week's games will attest.

The Senators meet the strong Bacharach Giants in a double-header tomorrow. The Bacharach crew, who have won 17 consecutive victories and are out to set a record in colored baseball, are the oldest and one of the outstanding Negro teams in the East.

O'Mahoney to Meet Joe Dusek or Cox

A guy named Joe, either Joe Dusek or Joe Cox, will be Danno O'Mahoney's opponent in the feature wrestling bout next Thursday night at Griffith Stadium, Promoter Joe Turner announced last night.

Either will be acceptable to the fans, who delight in their rough-house antics and sometimes clever holds. But Turner will not know until late tonight which, if either, of the two will be available.

Turner prefers Dusek, for he tossed Cox last Thursday at Wildwood, N. J., in a riotous scrap that kept the house in an uproar. The promoter feels that the youngest of the Dusek clan may be the prospect he is looking for to restore vitality to the declining sport.

Post Circulators Meet Takoma A.C. Tomorrow

The Takoma Athletic Club nine will meet the Washington Post Circulators Sunday at 3 p. m. on the Takoma field. E. Skinner and J. Burger will do the flinging for Takoma while either Jim Dennis or Dick Meyers are slated to hurl for The Post lads. Assistant Manager Brown requests that all members of the Circulators be at Stewart's Pharmacy at 12 noon.

Potomac Boat Club's Regatta Is Postponed

The Potomac Boat Club's regatta scheduled tomorrow has been postponed until mid-July, George Hernan, club president, announced last night. A mix-up in plans of several entrants, which would preclude any possibility of their competing, caused officials to set back the event.

Seeking Players.

V. M. Lawrence, manager of the Holy Comforter Insect baseball team, is anxious to obtain three players. He is sorely in need of a good left-handed hurler, and a couple of hard-hitting fielders. If interested call Atlantic 7268-R or visit Lawrence at 1225 H street northeast.

Braves Trounce Panthers.

Foreign Markets.

London, June 24 (AP).—Stock prices were again active and strong being favorably impressed by the continued sharp advance and heavy trading in the New York market. Base metal issues were prominent in the upward surge, and other leading favorites pushed higher. Textiles, aviation issues and commodity stocks made substantial gains, and the transatlantic group finished with advances ranging from 1 to 5 points and foreign bonds remained steady.

Paris.—The Bourse closed with a firm tone although international securities were mixed. Rentes gained 45 to 120 centimes and Royal Dutch and Suez Canal were up about 80 francs. Bank of France issues slipped backward for a loss of 60 francs. The industrial section was firm and active at higher prices.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures moved irregularly and finished ⅛ to ¼d net higher. Prices were down early on cheaper Canadian offers, rallied sharply on the strength in the securities markets and eased again on larger weekly Australian clearances. Influenced by the buoyancy of the New York stock market and other commodities, cotton futures advanced sharply and closed 10 to 11 points net advance. Higher prices attracted Bombay and Egyptian selling.

The Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime.

MY ARTHUR IS SO HIGH STRUNG AND TEMPERAMENTAL WE THINK HE MUST BE ARTISTIC OR SOMETHING. HE WALKS IN HIS SLEEP TOO
MY GOODNESS ME! HOW REMARKABLE! HOW DO YOU ACCOUNT FOR IT?
THE REALIZATION THAT YOU WERE NOT LIKE THE COMMON HERD —

"The Timid Soul" by Webster Appears in Sunday's Post.

Bob Burns Says—

I never saw anybody that looked anything at all like their own baby pictures, yet every time one of the poor little innocent things are born, all the friends and kinfolks gather around it and can definitely see that it has its mother's eyes, its father's nose and its grandpa "So and so's" mouth.

I have an artist friend who became a proud papa not long ago and the other day a lady met him on the street and said, "I just saw your wonderful baby and it has a complexion exactly like its mother." The artist looked wild-eyed and said, "Excuse me, but I better be gettin' home—the baby's been playin' in my paints again!"

The Sad Story of a Beard and Art

Art—and Frommer—Losers As Uncle Sam Frowns on Beard

Railroad Retirement Board Employe, Who Made $1 an Hour Displaying Whiskers for Photographers, Now Rubs Shaven Chin and Pines.

A sad case in which Art (and $1 an hour) has been brought to its knees in the classic precincts of Washington came to light yesterday as John Frommer rubbed his beardless chin and pined.

Frommer, a short fellow with dreamy eyes, won't speak of it—but his friends want the world to know.

"John," they will tell you, "had a beard not so long ago. It was a beard to stroke and one for the photographers to pay $1 an hour for. The better lenses were focused at one time or another on John's beard. But John worked at the Railroad Retirement Board. And there the bosses hinted that the Civil Service didn't rule against fine beards or any beards—but administratively, a beard was frowned upon.

"John shaved his beard to hold his job. And, of course, the professional artists, the professional photographers, didn't want him without the beard. John hardly wants himself without a beard, but he took the hint at the RRB and shaved.

"Of course, the $1 an hour he got posing was helpful, but never mind the mercenary aspects. John is an artist born. The dramatic arts are as much a part of him as the beard, which hand-maidened his art, ought to be. He carried his beard and sensibilities to the Corcoran, to Critcher, to the Phillips, and there is a record of his sittings. John doesn't want to give it up forever, for art is long and time is fleeting. And the better beards are rare. John can grow them!

"The whole process requires hardly two weeks. Of course, a new beard itches like the dickens or long underwear, but John would suffer for his Art. And he can see both sides of the situation. He knows that the beard was a little distracting to other workers in the RRB, but, by the same token, Jim Ham Lewis' beard never bothered his Senatorial colleagues, excepting to excite their envy. And Senator Lewis never made $1 an hour with his beard.

"We'll tell you, John really suffers about the thing. Art has been in his soul since he worked for the Lambs Club and the Friars Club in New York. He was a page and general attendant there and knew all the artists and actors. He had eye enough then to see that a dollar an hour (sometimes $5 an hour) is in a beard. And there's nothing in Civil Service rules to say that a man can't pick up $1 an hour on the side or wear a beard for Uncle Sam. John's record in the Government is flawless."

Tornado Throws House Into River

Joliet, Ill., June 24 (U.P.).—A two-story frame building was upended and tossed into the Illinois River tonight by a tornado which struck briefly in Joliet's north side. No one was injured.

Witnesses said the building, office of Joliet government engineers, was picked up, turned over in the air, and dropped into the river, narrowly missing a Government barge on which were several members of the crew. A man had walked from the building just before the tornado struck.

President Called A Master at Talk Telling Nothing

By the Associated Press.

Mrs. Edna Eaton Wilson, of Ripley, Okla., a champion country newspaper correspondent, said yesterday that the President's press conference was "better behaved than I expected."

Mrs. Wilson, "let down" because she did not see the President personally afterwards, said she thought Mr. Roosevelt was a "past master at answering questions without telling anything."

The Oklahoma woman was this year's winner of a rural magazine's contest to determine who is the best country correspondent in the Nation.

U. S. Out of Inquiry.
